Work Stoppages Sweep Soft Coal Mines

15,000 QUIT DIGGINGS IN WAGE DISPUTE

Nationwide Strike Expected Within 72 Hours By Capital Observers.

LEWIS SEES COMMITTEE

Union Expected To Endorse Chief's Defiance of War Labor Board.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—A wave of work stoppages in the nation's war-vital soft coal mines swept the country today as the international policy committee of the United Mine Workers of America met at the Hotel Roosevelt to decide the nation's next step in the current wage controversy.

John L. Lewis, president of the union will preside at the policy committee meeting which will start at 2 p. m. behind closed doors.

The committee is expected to vote full endorsement of Lewis defiance of the National War Labor board, despite a personal telegraphed plea from William H. Davis, board chairman in which he asked the individual union leaders to "urge the workers to return to their jobs immediately . . . so that a nation at war may have maximum production . . ."

There was every indication that the policy committee will take no action to halt the work stoppages that already have drawn 15,000 soft coal miners from the pits and threaten to close every bituminous mine in the country when the present temporary contract with the operators expires at midnight Friday.

Instead, it was intimated, that the policy committee would make a single declaration that the bituminous industry would be without an operating contract after Friday.

Such an announcement, it was conceded, would be the signal for work stoppages throughout the industry, as the union always has followed the policy of "no contract; no work." This policy is Committee Votes To Extend Trade Agreement Law.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The house ways and means committee by a vote of 14 to 11 today approved a three-year extension of the reciprocal trade agreement law.

Only one amendment was attached to the legislation by the committee. This would authorize the president, at his discretion, to suspend the application of the act to articles controlled by international cartels.

Republican attempts to restrict the operations of the program were defeated by votes of 14 to 11, according to Republican members.

GIVEN PAROLE

Agnes Dickinson Will Leave Reformatory July 1.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Agnes B. Dickinson, disbarred Columbus attorney who gained prominence through a series of suits she brought against the state government, was paroled today from the women's reformatory at Marysville where she was serving a sentence for embezzlement. The parole is effective July 1.

Mrs. Dickinson entered prison Dec. 30, 1941, to serve one to 10 years after her conviction of charges of taking $10,000 from the estate of an incompetent for whom she was guardian.

STALIN SALUTES

Sends 'Best Wishes' to Mexico And Its President.

MEXICO CITY—(INS)—A salute to President Manuel Avila Camacho of Mexico by Premier Joseph Stalin, of Russia was made public today.

Replying to a letter from President Avila Camacho praising the Soviets for their heroic fight against the Germans, Stalin said: "I beg of you, Senor Presidente, to transmit to the friendly Mexican nation the best wishes of the Soviet nation."

WPB'S Order Averts City Water Peril

Threatened overtaxing of Mansfield's water supply this summer due to the increased demands of industry appeared averted today when the city received a high priority rating for pumping equipment ordered nearly a year ago to step up the output of the Maxwell Springs station.

War Production board approval of the purchase of a pump of 2,500 gallons per minute capacity and a new 200-horsepower motor by the WPB probably will bring delivery of the equipment by early summer, Mayor W. J. Locke said.

The city received a 3-A rating from the WPB, not the highest issued by the board but sufficient to guarantee early delivery of the equipment, the mayor believes. The pump, motor, and an oil starter will cost the city more than $4,000 but it will prepare the way for expansion of Mansfield industries, the mayor said.

Locke said a survey shows that the city will be using approximately 600,000 more gallons of water daily by next July than before the war and unless the water facilities are expanded, the pumping system may be inadequate to meet the demand.

He said the growth of existing industries now handling war contracts and the addition of a number of new ones during the past year were responsible for most of the increased demand for water.

Meanwhile, the city is awaiting WPB approval of plans for modernizing and expanding the North Main street station under a project expected to cost about $5,000.

Plans call for removal of the city waterworks meter department to the North Main station, construction of a small storage building at the station, and remodeling of the old building.

While the work won't require very much new equipment, the WPB must put its approval on the use of building materials, Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff said.

PRICE CONTROL PANEL CHECKED

Mansfield To Have Group With Duties To Check on Retail Prices.

To enable the public to help control prices in their own interest, price panels will be established in Mansfield and all 660 ration boards of Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia, the regional Office of Price Administration in Cleveland announced today.

Richland county has already started its price panel organization, with the appointment of Brooks Huber, Johnny Appleseed junior high school teacher, as chairman.

Ration Chairman C. C. Beelman said two or three others would be named soon as members of the price board and perhaps other matters of organization will be completed, follow-

BERN, Switzerland — (AP) — Germany's latest request for a new contingent of 220,000 Frenchmen to help construct coastal fortifications has disclosed that the Nazis' "Atlantic wall" is not yet finished, unusually reliable French circles said today.

PREDICTS AXIS WILL ATTEMPT TO BOMB OHIO

State Defense Director Sees Raids Planned To Bolster Enemy's Morale.

NAZIS HAVE PLANES

Craft Could Fly Atlantic and Return in Good Weather; War Plants Likely Target.

(Editor's Note: In a series of three articles, of which this is the first, State Defense Director Ralph H. Stone warns that America—and Ohio in particular—likely will be bombed by the Axis this spring and summer. People must realize the danger, he points out, and prepare for any eventuality.)

By RALPH H. STONE

(Written for the Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — To bolster sagging morale at home and to give a spectacular touch to the Nazi war effort, Hitler undoubtedly will endeavor to bomb American cities this spring and summer.

This opinion is shared by many high officials of the army and civilian defense authorities in Washington, and every man, woman and child must recognize the danger and be ready to cope with any emergency.

My belief is based on the following reasons, which coincide with recent expressions of army officials:

1. The Axis is anxious to retaliate and strike back at the United States for successfully employing its planes in bombing forays in Africa, Germany, Italy and Japan.

2. Washington is the only capital of any of the major warring nations that has escaped a bombing. This is a source of irritation to Axis war lords, it is believed, and a successful raid on Washington or some other city would tend to humiliate the American public in the same manner that Tokyo lost face after the Doolittle expedition.

It also might be pointed out that Germany's Goering lost considerable prestige when his promises that Berlin would never be bombed backfired.

3. Hitler must do something to

MORE SPUDS

Richland Farmers To Boost Planting By 250 Acres.

Richland county will produce approximately 19 per cent more potatoes, or an additional 250 acres, this summer if the weather doesn't hinder planting, members of the county Triple-A committee predicted today.

The county usually raises about 1,300 acres of potatoes. A pre-planting survey conducted by the county agricultural war board indicates the crop this year will be stepped up to about 1,550 acres.

The department of agriculture has classed potatoes as one of the essential war foods and urged farmers to grow more of them. Under the Triple-A farm program, growers may earn incentive payments of 50 cents per bushel on potatoes planted in excess of 90 per cent of their goal and up to 110 per cent of the goal.

Scenes In Coal Strike Crisis

Striking coal miners at California, Pa., play cards while war-vital mines are idle, in the top photo. Elsewhere in the nation thousands of miners walked off their jobs in a wave of work stoppages that threatens to tie up the nation's soft coal production. Led by UMW chief John L. Lewis, miners are in open revolt against handling of wage contract negotiations by the War Labor board. Negotiator for southern coal miners, M. L. Garvey, left, and former Senator Edward R. Burke, right, president of the Southern Coal Producers association are shown, in the lower photo leaving a WLB conference.

Happy Again, 'Lost Johnny' Says Runaway Days Are Over

Writing a happy chapter in his strange story, Joseph Pertz, 13, who as "Lost Johnny Corn" seeking his grandmother's home in this area baffled Richland county authorities earlier this month, today had recounted details of his reunion with family and friends in Akron in a letter received by Sheriff Frank Robinson.

"I am never going to run away from home anymore," the letter said, in part, adding a few sentences farther along that "I'm awfully sorry for all those lies I told you."

Johnny spent several nights at the Salvation Army detention quarters and several days in company of sheriff's offices while they sought information concerning the fictitious grandmother Johnny said lived in the Lucas-Perrysville community. The boy first appeared wet and hungry at an Oak street rural home where he recited the story of having "lost" his home somewhere along the railroad tracks which he said he followed to Mansfield.

Describing his reunion with his mother, who is ill, the boy wrote: "She cried and I cried and she kissed me and I kissed her back. It was very nice to see my mother, my sister, my father and my cousins. I am never going to run away anymore. I promise you."

Sheriff Robinson kept his promise too. He relayed the messages of the lad to each of those to whom they were directed before writing him a letter concerning M'Nair Leaves Hospital After Being Treated For Wounds.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa — April 26 — (Delayed)—(AP)—Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, chief of all American ground forces, left a hospital bed today only three days after he had been injured by a German artillery shell.

Pinned conspicuously on McNair's uniform was the Order of Purple Heart put there yesterday by the second corps commander for wounds received when a shell landed nearby while McNair was observing an American advance in northern Tunisia.

McNair suffered a scalp laceration from a small fragment which pierced his helmet and a fractured shoulder from a larger fragment.

$112,000 DAILY BOND GOAL FOR REST OF WEEK

Public Must Buy $450.626 Worth If Campaign's to End Successfully Saturday.

$864,526 STILL NEEDED

Richland Banks To Take Up $414,000 Worth, Balance Up to Individuals.

More than $112,000 worth of bonds a day must be bought by Richland countians during the last four days of the second War Loan drive if the county drive goes over its $6,649,000 goal by Saturday night.

Here is the reason:

A $5,784,473.45 total subscription reported today leaves the drive $864,526.55 from the finish line. Of this amount, the banks will buy $414,000 leaving $450,526.55 for the public to subscribe.

Bond purchases yesterday amounted to $270,488.75 of which $220,000 represents bank purchases and $55,488.75 that of non-bank investors. To date a total of $1,810,000 has been subscribed by the banks against their $2,224,000 quota and $8,484,473.45 has been subscribed by non-bank sources toward their $4,425,000 quota.

The drive will continue through Saturday with any purchases until midnight Saturday counting on the goal of the drive.

Intensive campaign reports were coming in today with a report from Shelby noting that the bond drive there is nearing the one million mark. Tabulation by banks, postoffice and other places of purchase showed a total subscription of $917,025, or about 83 per cent of the goal of $1,100,000.

Rides in a jeep Saturday given in Shelby to every person purchasing a bond and every child buying $5 worth of stamps accounted for a sale of $5,000 in bonds and stamps at a special sale booth in Central school park downtown. Banks and other war bond selling agencies reported an increase sale during that day. The jeep was brought to Shelby from Camp Millard, Bucyrus, by Sgt. C. E. Trego.

An unusual bond sale spurring offer will be made Ohioans tomorrow night when they will have a chance to "buy" their

600 Take Part In City's 'Music Week' Programs May 2-7

More than 600 Mansfield musicians, members of 35 musical organizations, will take part in the Mansfield observance of National Music week May 2 to 7. The Music Study club is sponsoring the celebration here.

"Foster American and World Unity through Music" has been chosen as the keynote for the week's celebration, according to an announcement of the National and Inter-American Music Week committee.

A sacred concert by 12 church choirs with their directors and organists will open the music week here Sunday at 4 p. m. Participating choirs are those of the Congregational, Episcopal, First Lutheran, South Main Evangelical, First Methodist, Mayflower Congregational, Christian, First Presbyterian, St. Luke's Lutheran, Central Methodist, St. John's Evangelical and Reformed, and the Park Avenue Baptist churches.

Following the presentation of an anthem by each of these choirs

British Bombs Blast Duisburg In Giant Raid

Block-Busters And Firebombs Wreck Havoc In Nazi Steel City.

(By United Press)

LONDON—A great force of British four-engined bombers hammered the river port and steel city of Duisburg last night with upwards of 1,500 tons of bombs in one of the heaviest raids of the war on Germany.

Well-informed sources said the raid was comparable in weight to the 1,000-plane raid of last May 30 on Cologne, when 1,500 tons of bombs were dropped. Though fewer planes participated in last night's assault, almost all were four-engines giants.

The huge cargoes of bombs—ranging from four-ton super block busters to two-pound incendiaries — touched off fierce fires and big explosions that sent smoke billowing up to nearly 10,000 feet over Duisburg last night, the air ministry said.

(A British broadcast heard by the United Press in New York said the raid was the severest ever made on Germany.)

Seventeen planes were lost in the raid, the third on Germany in less than 12 hours.

"Preliminary reports indicate that the bombing was highly concentrated," the air ministry said.

Roaring back into action after a five-night, weather-enforced lull, the four-engined Lancasters and Halifaxes bombarded docks, warehouses, steel mills and coke ovens in one of the most important industrial cities in Germany.

Duisberg is the largest inland port in Europe and is situated on a canal linking the Ruhr and the Rhine. Last night's raid was the 59th of the war on the port, which last was attacked the night of April 9.

Although the four-engined bombers had not been in action since the triple raid on Berlin, 80 German Tanks Destroyed In Fierce Clash In Tunisia.

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—Allied armored forces have driven to within four miles of the Tunis-Pont Du Fahs road and have destroyed 80 German tanks in the big-scale battle which has raged since Sunday, Allied quarters announced today.

Farther north, the British First army infantry cleared 11 miles of the road from Medjez-El-Bab to Tebourba and reached Toum railroad station, only 23 miles west of Tunis, front line dispatches reported, and for the first time since last November the Allies were again on the threshold to the Tunis plain.

In the sector between Medjez-El-Bab and the Mediterranean, the Americans of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., continued an advance so rapid that German rearguards were unable to bury their dead and assaulted the two strategic knobs, Green Hill and Bald Hill, the most heavily fortified mountains in the northern sector.

This was the first time in the campaign that this has happened.

But the Germans left extremely heavy minefields which held up the American progress through a valley northeast of Beja and west of Lake Achkel, the western shore of which is only 17 miles from Bizerte.

The advancing doughboys, however, took more hill territory from the Nazis, including positions on Djebel Meftah, a key ridge.

These Allied thrusts accompanied gains all along the 140-mile front in fighting which the Allied headquarters communique characterized as of "unabated ferocity." They were participated in by Allied air forces which flew

PARLEY: U. S., British Seek To Heal Soviet-Polish Rupture

(By United Press)

LONDON—Britain and the United States began discussions today on means of restoring diplomatic relations between Russia and the Polish exile government, but a Moscow dispatch said only a purge of Polish anti-Soviet elements would satisfy Russia.

The Anglo-American discussions were disclosed by authoritative sources who declined, however, to give any details.

The Polish government was reported reliably to be considering a request to President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill to intervene in the crisis.

Meantime, the Polish cabinet was scheduled to meet today to discuss the situation.

A dispatch from M. S. Handler, United Press correspondent in Moscow, said there appeared to be two essential conditions for any conciliation between the two governments:

1. All political elements which the Soviet government considers hostile to Russia must be eliminated from the Polish government.

2. The new Polish government must be composed of men ready to settle Soviet-Polish problems on a basis of realities.

Handler said the Soviet note to Poland merely "suspended" relations between the two countries, thus leaving the door open for an agreement with those Poles who are inclined to take a more realistic view of Soviet-Polish ties.

Soviet sources in London, translated the note as completely "severing" or "breaking off" relations,

THREAT: Allied Push Closing In On Key Jap Salamauma Base

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Army bombers broke a four-day lull in raids on Japanese-held Kiska island, the navy reported today, by blasting the enemy base 13 times Sunday. Results were not observed exactly due to poor visibility, a communique said. Heavy bombers also struck at Attu island.

(By Associated Press)

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters disclosed today American and Australian troops now command a hill overlooking Mubo village, only 12 miles south of the big Japanese base at Salamaua, New Guinea, and Allied patrols have penetrated within six miles of the base itself.

Details of the Allied advance were lacking, and it was not immediately clear whether Gen. MacArthur's forces were prepared for a new offensive.

Observers noted recent communiques have stressed the incessant aerial pounding of Japanese troops below Salamaua—frequently the prelude to an offensive—and dispatches from Allied headquarters today said United Nations airmen were making 10 to 20 low-strafing sweeps over the enemy daily.

The last sizable action occurred early in February near Wau, 30 miles southwest of Salamaua, when the Japanese lost 1,000 troops. At that time, the enemy was reported galling back toward Mubo.

On the Burma front, British headquarters said Field Marshal Sir Archibald P. Wavell's troops beat off a new Japanese attack south of Buthedaung and in-

Shangri-La Diary

Navy Task Force Keeps Things Ship-Shape as It Steams Toward Secret Destination - - Tokyo

Guns Work Smoothly In Tests, Planes Fly Overhead Patrol.

By RICHARD TREGASKIS
(INS Staff Correspondent)

AT SEA—Up on the signal bridge I watched the exchange of information between our ship and the others of our task force. Among the busy figures on the bridge, I noticed a small, erect, slender man standing hatless and looking steadily out to sea. His sharp, translucent gray-green eyes were fascinating to watch. Suddenly he proffered a hand.

"My name is Spruance," he said. And then I noticed the two silver stars pinned on the unbuttoned collar of his shirt. This was Rear Admiral Raymond A. Spruance, cruiser commander, the most powerful figure aboard our ship, and second in command to Admiral Halsey.

But there were no delusions of grandeur in his manner. Obviously, he went hatless so that salutes would not be necessary. Except for the deference paid to him by all aboard, you would not know him as ruler of a small naval kingdom.

In this, the second installment of Shangri-La Diary, an account of the activity of the navy task force that accompanied the aircraft carrier Hornet, from which Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle's fliers bombed Tokyo, Richard L. Tregaskis, ace INS correspondent, describes how men of the task force go quietly about their anti-aircraft practice gunnery, still unaware of the historic mission assigned the bombing pilots aboard the Hornet.

Rear Admiral's Only Man Aboard Who Knows Fleet's Goal.

During the next few days I watched some of the ship's small caliber anti-aircraft guns firing trial rounds. The crash and bang of the firing was like the sound of a hundred drill presses—these guns are among the most powerful now installed on any warship.

The guns were in good working order. There were no jams. I

CHAPTER XXIII.

"Sergeant Wayne, you say this is better than the houses you had in England!" Rosemary seemed almost frantic.

"Why—yes. But—"

"Then come on!"

"I beg your pardon!"

"Come on! All of you. Hurry! We've got to go to town. We must get started doing things."

"Please, Miss Lee, I'm afraid we are all a little confused. Perhaps you'd let me try to—"

She was tugging at him now, leading them all back down hill toward Uncle Pete's hotel. And she had a new look of elation.

"Hurry, hurry!" she urged. "I—you said I was to be in charge in Mr. St. Clair's absence. You were ordered to report to me as his lieutenant. Didn't you? Didn't you?"

"Why—yes. But—"

"Then come on! I command you!"

"Surely, Miss Lee!"

They broke into a trot behind her. All the young men were smiling now. Curious. Interested. After all, Rosemary was an exceptionally pretty somebody, approximately their own age. A girl lieutenant? Commissioned officer over them? What fun? Even the sergeant beamed at his men.

She saw the smiles and understood them, but she was very much in earnest when she halted before the hotel. Once more she grasped Sergeant Wayne by the arm and shook him a little.

"I may not be literally your lieutenant," she spoke fast, "but you must help me. You must!"

The seregant saluted, still smiling. "For so nice a lady, we'll do anything! Eh men?"

"Yea-a-a-a!" That was a chorus again.

"We must all go to Option at once. In your care and mine. If we—Oh!"

She broke off, staring. Her car was parked nearby, but even now Uncle Pete Quincy was laboring at it. He was jacking up a very flat rear tire.

"Runned over a hoss shoe with a rusty nail into it," he called. "I'll git it fixed for you."

"That'll take time," she breathed. Then louder. "Sergeant, we must go in your peep and motorcycles."

"Righto. Little crowded, perhaps, but—"

"I can sit in somebody's lap if I have to. I mean, I don't weigh much and—"

They started a scramble. Men leaped for the jeep, hoping to go with Rosemary. In their rush, they over-did it and left one sidecar empty. Rosemary stepped into it and sat down. The grinning young British driver gave his comrades a very American Bronx salute, then drove off in triumph.

"A private is not supposed to ask questions, Lieutenant Lee," the young man began, tentatively, after the first swift mile.

She smiled at him — manna enough! "You are very nice. All of you."

"I just wanted to say—if there's any trouble, please ask for me to stand by! I mean it!"

She looked at him quickly. The lad wasn't joking. He couldn't have been a day over 21 years and his face was like somebody's kid brother in college. She smiled again.

"Could I have you for a—a kind of orderly?" she asked.

"WHOOP!" he shouted, at his companions behind him.

He kept his position as escort jealously when they stopped in town. Even Sergeant Wayne felt himself out-maneuvered. But Rosemary gave them little time for personal business here because she had strange urgency. They had stopped at a wholesale warehouse near the railroad tracks, and now she led them in.

"I am in a hurry," she told the sleepy clerk there. "And I—"

"Everybody is these days, cutie," the clerk winked broadly, and didn't move.

Instantly Rosemary's orderly grabbed him by the collar and shook him a little. "The lady is serious," he hissed. "This is Lieutenant Rosemary Lee, buddy. Understand!"

That maneuver astonished everybody. But it got results!

"I—I—yes sir!" grumbled the clerk. After all, the army runs America now, and these men were in uniform.

Rosemary swallowed. "We—we want 100 brooms!"

"Br—brooms?"

"You heard her!" the orderly snapped.

"Yes sir. I mean, yes ma'am. . . . A hundred brooms."

"They're for the army," she explained. "We can fill out the proper requisition forms so you'll be paid promptly, but we want delivery at once."

"Yes ma'am."

"And we want 100 mops. For floors. And—and 100 pails. I guess. And goodness—we'll need scads of soap and scouring powder and rags and dust pans and all those things."

"Yes ma'am."

"Can you hurry them? We haven't any time to spare."

"I—I've only got one warehouse helper, Miss. But I'll sure rush as fast as I—"

* * *

Sergeant Wayne stepped up. "On the contrary, you have eight!" said he. "Men! File through. Where is this stuff, mister? Show it to us!"

This crisp military manner thrilled Rosemary. Life hadn't been like that around her of late. She turned to the sergeant.

"That caravan—do you think the men could double up for the last 12 miles to Lightning? And make room for these things?"

"Of course!" Promptly he detailed a man to go to the highway and meet the trucks that were coming.

"Sergeant," she demanded then, "do you know what I have in mind? Why I'm buying these things?"

"Not for sure," the young Britisher smiled, "but I can hope. At any rate, if I read Mr. St. Clair rightly he'll appreciate action. He's not the type who wants to stall around!"

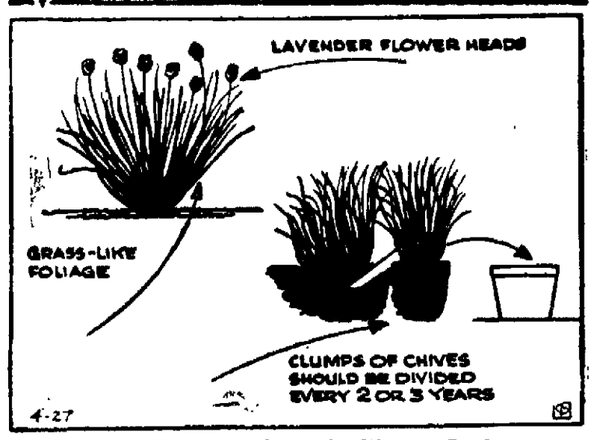
Newark City Officials Unload Freight Car, Save City Money.

NEWARK —(U.P.)— When city officials learned that demurrage charges would begin immediately if a freight car containing 40 tons of soda ash wasn't unloaded, they rolled up their sleeves and went to work.

No workers could be found so Mayor Arthur B. Lockwood, Police Chief Gail Christman, Fire Chief Stanley Shaw, Service Director S. A. Anderson, City Solicitor Charles W. Holtsberry and other officials pitched in and unloaded the car.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Chives Deserve a Place In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Ass'n.

CHIVES ARE hardy perennial herbs and are easy to grow. They are especially valuable for their delicate onion flavoring and are used chiefly in salads, omelettes, sauces, soups, stews and cottage or cream cheeses. It is because of these many uses as a flavoring that chives deserve a place in the Victory garden.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, chives as a growing plant are very attractive. The plant produces small round flower heads of lavender which remain in bloom for several weeks. The foliage is grass-like. Chives make good edging plants for the Victory vegetable garden for they form dense mats and make a permanent planting.

Chives should be dug up every second or third year and divided otherwise, they grow too thickly or mat-like. One good method of keeping chives in bounds is to dig them up each fall and then cut off a section of tops and roots, as illustrated, and pot them for use indoors as a kitchen herb. Chives so treated will keep on growing if placed in a sunny window.

Chives can be grown from seeds or by division of the bulbs. The bulb is ¾ of an inch long and has many rootlets. Any neighbor who has chives growing in the garden will be glad to share a few of the bulbs.

PENNIES BUY JEEP

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—A jeep "to make the Axis creep" has been purchased for the army by members of boys' clubs throughout the nation. They raised a total of $1,105.11—all in pennies—to buy the jeep.

SPEEDS WEDDING

LOS ANGELES —(U.P.)— After waiting for six years to marry the girl to whom he was engaged it took a Japanese torpedo to make Merchant Marine Seaman Kent Atridge, 22, former University of Arizona ballplayer, finally make up his mind. Attridge was in the crow's nest of a Liberty ship when the Jap tin fish struck. He got down in a hurry and into a lifeboat, meantime vowing that he would marry his sweetheart the moment he got home.

True to his vow, immediately upon his arrival here from Australia he was married to Miss Shirley Cheatam, 22.

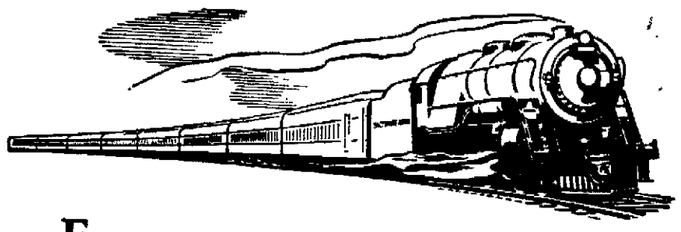
SERVICE
YOU ALWAYS CAN COUNT ON!



EVERYONE recognizes a bank as one of the bulwarks of his community. You may not call on its services very often, but doesn't it give you confidence to know it will be there when you need it?

Think of your railroad, too, as a bulwark—a mighty organization that makes your town strong by binding it with the culture and markets of other communities on its lines. It takes vast capital and resources and manpower to keep your railroad going—even when you are not using it—but, when you need it, it's always ready with service you can count on!

Right now, moving troops and equipment on time is the first "must" with the 60,000 B & O workers. When Victory is won our first concern will be the civilian interests of your town. Meanwhile, we're sure you'll agree those interests are being cared for adequately.

LONGER CAR LIFE!

Just 3 of the 10 big advantages of Sohio's new "ALL-OUT" SPECIAL now only $3.69!

NOW—more important than ever because of rationed driving!

THIS IMPORTANT OFFER is made possible through a new motor cleaning agent, SOHIO-TONE. It enables your SOHIO dealer to purge the inside of your motor thoroughly by a new process, in about thirty minutes flat.

But that's not all! Over and above the SOHIO-TONE treatment, the "ALL-OUT" includes a COMPLETE GEAR OIL CHANGE (all you need for both transmission and differential) and FIVE QUARTS OF SOHIO MOTOR OIL!

This combination offer gives you the ten great big advantages listed on the right. So hurry, bustle, rush to the SOHIO station that features this offer—it's good for a limited time only!

THE STANDARD OIL CO. (OHIO)

1 SAVES YOUR GAS! This "ALL-OUT" treatment improves mileage. In many cars the saving in gasoline alone will pay for the treatment.

2 RESTORES POWER! SOHIO's "ALL-OUT" Special gives greater power and new pep to sluggish motors.

3 MOTOR GETS INTERNAL "BATH"! Thanks to a new development, your motor is purged and cleaned inside, so that oil will flow freely in summer months to come.

4 CARBON TAKEN OUT! This "ALL-OUT" treatment loosens much of the carbon and it is drained out with the old oil while you wait.

5 SLUDGE REMOVED! This "ALL-OUT" Special helps rid your motor of damaging sludge waste that has been piling up in your crankcase over this gas-rationed winter.

6 VALVES AND RINGS FREED AND CLEANED! Without taking the head off the motor, the "ALL-OUT" improves ring action and helps free sticky valves.

7 OIL STAYS CLEANER! After this remarkable treatment, oil will stay far cleaner . . . longer. You get 5 qts. of famous SOHIO MOTOR OIL included in this price.

8 LONGER GEAR LIFE! Gears rid of harmful waste . . . and fresh, new SOHIO Summer Gear Oil added. A complete gear oil change—all you need—is included in the "ALL-OUT" Special price.

9 LONGER CAR LIFE! By restoring health to your precious motor, transmission and differential, SOHIO's "ALL-OUT" Special actually makes your car last longer.

10 HOT WEATHER PROTECTION! Now, with a fresh, sweet-singing motor, and all these danger points protected, you can turn into the hot summer months with your transportation well guarded.

METHODIST GUILD HAS 'INTERNATIONAL TEA'

Mrs. A. J. Hill In Charge of Program Presented By Guild Members; H. W. Peterson Is Guest Speaker.

MRS. RAY PAULSON, president of the Central Methodist guild, welcomed guests and extended an invitation to any who desired to join the guild at the "International Tea," a guest party, held at the church Monday night.

Thirty-six guests and thirty-one members heard the program which was in charge of Mrs. A. J. Hill. Mrs. Hill presented Miss Marilyn Jean Little, pupil of Miss Florence McDonald, who sang to recorded orchestration, the French songs "Depuis Le Jour" from the opera "Louise" by Gustave Charpentier, and "Les Filles de Cadix" by delibes.

Mrs. Valmore Isham, pianist, played two Spanish numbers the first of which was entitled "Y-Como Le Va" by Valverde, and "Spanish Dance" by Moszkowski. "He Knows Just How Much You Can Bear" was sung by Mrs. Stella Waddell, to her own accompaniment. Miss Marilyn Skeese read the French dramatic sketch, "Camille."

"The Minstrel Boy," an Irish song, "All Through the Night," an old Welsh melody and "Loch Lomond," from Scotland, were sung by Mrs. E. C. Browser, who was accompanied by Miss Betty Burneson.

H. W. Peterson, introduced by Mrs. Claude Ewing, gave a talk on "Hymns." Mrs. Peterson stated "In the singing of hymns, we are all one, and interdenominational barriers are surmounted. We sing 'In the Cross of Christ I Glory,' written by a Unitarian; 'Lead Kindly Light,' a Catholic hymn; 'Oh Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go,' a Scotch Presbyterian hymn; and 'Dear Lord and Father of Mankind,' written by a Quaker."

Mrs. E. C. Jenkins closed the program with a prayer.

During roll call each member introduced her guests. Palms, fern, Easter lilies, forsythia and tulips decorated the church parlor. Yellow tapers and spring flowers centered a table from which refreshments were served.

Mrs. R. K. Clark, chairman of the hostess committee was assisted by Mrs. Howard Handel, Mrs. D. E. Patterson, Mrs. A. J. Barker, Mrs. J. J. Swisher and Mrs. Virt Simpson. The next meeting will be May 17, at the home of Mrs. N. C. Yarger, 82 Dawson avenue.

Mother-Daughter Tea Will Be Given By St. John Guild

Final plans were made for the Mother-Daughter tea to be held May 2 from 2 til 4 p. m. at the meeting of the Katherine Aberle guild of the St. John's Evangelical church, with Mrs. William McBride, 61 Raleigh avenue.

Fifteen members and 12 guests attended the meeting. After devotions, a business meeting was in charge of Mrs. Elmer Heedeen, the guild's president. A special invitation was extended to all mothers and daughters in the church to attend the tea. Miss Murial Voll is the chairman of the program committee for that event. The refreshment committee chairman is Mrs. Frank May.

Members of the guild decided to change the date of meetings to the fourth Monday of the month. The May 24 meeting will be held with Mrs. W. E. Post, 274 Davis road.

Monday Club Has Dinner Bridge for Year's Last Meet

A dinner bridge was held for the last meeting of the year of the Monday Study club with 21 members present.

Dinner was served at small tables attractively decorated with spring bouquets. Individual prizes in bridge were war stamps. The high score was won by Mrs. Charles Oller and low score by Mrs. Paul Weir.

The committee in charge of the meeting was Mrs. W. E. Slabaugh, Mrs. Henry Huston and Mrs. Lowell Bournes.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, April 28.

A day on which the fortunes may be moderately successful and gainful through the use of well laid plans. There may be perplexities which might negative some valid procedures and set at naught sound prospects. Shun bickering and sarcastic speech.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of some perplexities and confusions which may defeat or hamper certain clever and well grounded efforts. Impulsive, erratic and nervous actions may provoke trouble and argument. Keep poised and be vigilant against deceit and tricks.

A child born on this day will have versatility and talent but may defeat its ultimate success by sarcastic or offensive words and acts born of nervous energies and emotional urges.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

The volley found its mark. I had no doubt about that as I saw the grayness that crept over my brother-cousin's face and noted the mounting fury in his eyes.

"What!" he shouted. "She dared—" Then he sank back in his chair, and forced his voice to a sinister monotone.

"You evidently have a story to tell me, Margaret," he said. "Will you please get on with it, omitting no detail?"

"Gladly," I said, "if you will promise not to interrupt."

He gripped the arms of his chair and nodded assent. "Go ahead," he said.

I began with Hal Meredith's call upon me and his story of Ruth Hayes' vicious attempt to blackmail himself and Katharine, if he failed to persuade her to give him information of her husband's whereabouts.

Jack grew whiter, if possible, as I talked, but kept his promise to make no comment until I finished. When I finally told him that Ruth was to appear at Hal's office the next day, and that my father would then act to draw her fangs and make her powerless for further harm, he caught his breath sharply, then exclaimed in sudden fury.

"The lying beast!" he said. "Did Katharine believe I had done that—had started divorce proceedings against her? Of course Meredith probably believed it. He knows nothing about me except my record as the worst husband in the world."

"Hal didn't know," I said, "and he took my word that you couldn't have done anything of the sort. Katharine never gave the tale an instant's credence, any more than I did. And of course the blackmail angle is a farce. No newspaper would pay any attention to a yarn like that without proof. But with Hal it proved a good bluff."

"I hope I never see that fiend again," he said, with a groan that was also a snarl. "I shall go to the electric chair for murder if I do. To think what I have unloosened in Katharine's life!"

"You have unloosened nothing which will not be securely caged again," I said, "and the vengeance of the country she is betraying will take care of her, and will save you any further trouble concerning her. And now I have told you everything that has happened, and any more talk would be futile."

"There is but one thing to do now," I told him firmly. "I am going to get Katharine, if my father gives me permission, and bring her down here. Then you can talk it all out."

"No!" he said explosively.

"Yes," I returned with equal force. "I am at the end of my patience with you, Jack. Your viewpoint is false and twisted. Now please wait here while I call my father, get his permission for the interview, and make arrangements for getting hold of Katharine."

He seized my arm as I started for the door.

"You can't do this to me, Margaret," he said savagely. "Do you think I will let Katharine see me like this?" And with his free hand he gestured to his hair and beard with a look of intense disgust.

His cry of protest and haunted eyes stopped me more effectually than his clutching hand on my arm. He had advanced the one argument which would appeal to a woman—his horror of letting Katharine see him in his present unshaven and unshorn disguise, after so long an absence from her.

I think he saw my wavering in my eyes, for he spoke again, imploringly.

"I can't see her like this, Margaret. Don't you see? I can't do it. I'd rather die."

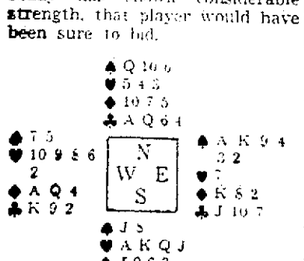
"The Authority on Authorities"

SOME FINESSES MARKED

You can tell about certain finesses in advance, if you try. They are marked as sure to win or lose. In other words, the location of some key honor or honors has been indicated by either the bidding or the preceding play, or a combination of them. If one defender has shown considerable honor strength already in the play, and neither he nor his partner had bid, you can be pretty sure the partner has any important honors which have not yet shown up. How? Why, because if they were in the hand which already has shown considerable strength, that player would have been sure to bid.



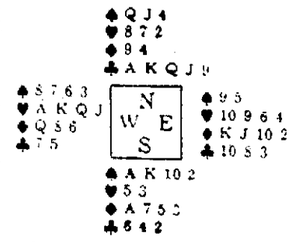
(Dealer: East East-West vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♥	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

South scored the heart K and then led the J, which East ruffed. He took in his spade A and K, and then tried a finesse of the club J, which North won with the Q. There was no way now, of course, to make the contract, as the club A and spade Q were sure winners for the defense.

North's plays of the 3 and 4 on the first two heart leads should have shown East how to make his contract. They made it virtually positive that North had exactly three hearts and South the four top honors. If South also had any of the club strength, he might have made a bid, and hence the safest way was to count North for them. Whether that surmise was correct or not, the club losers could have been limited to one by sound play.

After ruffing the second heart, East should have cashed the two spade tops as he did, then should have gone to dummy with the diamond A and led a third heart to ruff, so as to get the suit out of North's hand. After using the diamond K, he then should have led to the Q, thus getting diamonds also out of the North's hand. Then should come the heart 9 from dummy. If North ruffed with the spade Q, he would be end-played having to lead a club. If he discarded a club instead, East should have ruffed and then led his last spade to North's Q. The latter then would have had to lead a club. In either event only one club trick could be lost.



(Dealer: South, East-West vulnerable.)

If South gets into 4-Spades on this deal, how should he play when West makes consecutive leads of hearts?

Mrs. Frank Kmetz Has Santa Maria Club Meet

MRS. ADA WILMUTH displayed her antique glass collection and explained various types of blown and moulded glass when the Santa Marie Study club met with Mrs. Frank Kmetz at the home of Mrs. Wilmuth, South Main street.

MRS. WILLIAM LAYTON TO GIVE BOOK REVIEW

Reviewer of Books Will Present 'Ambassadors In White' By Charles Morrow Wilson for Y. W. C. A. Members, Guests.

SOX — MRS WILLIAM LAYTON ....BYRNES

"AMBASSADORS IN WHITE," by Charles Morrow Wilson, is the title of the book which will be reviewed Thursday, April 29, for members of the Y. W. C. A., their friends, and the general public, by Mrs. William M. Layton.

Mr. Wilson, the author of several books on the Americas, has presented a well documented report on Latin America's situation regarding health and prospects for future improvement, especially in the light of the coming importance of Central and South America.

The epic story of medicine in the American tropics is presented for the first time in the pages of this volume. The men, famous and unknown, who have waged unheadlined war on the invisible deaths and diseases that make the countries to the south of us, truly a "sick man's society" were our first and are still our best ambassadors of good-will. Theirs is the story of a magnificent contribution.

Mr. Wilson tells of the struggles, against fearful odds, of the ambassadors in white, whom the United States and European nations have sent to Central and South America and the West Indies. He tells of victories and defeats and the tragic, apparently impenetrable mysteries, which have marked the course of the effort to change Latin America from a sick man's society to a healthy vigorous one, thereby making of the American tropics, a granary, a storehouse and bulwark for all of western civilization.

MRS. WILLIAM LAYTON

The author of the interesting novel was born in Fayetteville, Ark., in 1905. He is the author of "Backwoods America," "Roots of America," "America at Work" and "Central America." He was educated at the University of Arkansas. A newspaper man and foreign correspondent, he was listed in "Who's Who In America" in 1942-43.

Mrs. Layton, who has presented several book reviews in this city, is chairman for registration of blood donors and for office assistants of the local chapter of Red Cross. She is a member of the Nomad club, and was recently elected president of the Victorian club.

Mrs. Layton will give her review of the "Ambassadors In White" in the Y. W. C. A. at 7:45 p. m.

Legion Auxiliary Completes Plans For Conference

Plans for the spring conference for the Fifth district of the American Legion Auxiliary were made at its regular meeting Monday night at the Legion home. The conference was called for Sunday, May 2, in the high school auditorium in Crestline.

Mrs. Harvey Dickson, president of the auxiliary, and Mrs. Edith Metcalf, secretary were selected to represent the Mansfield unit at the conference.

Mrs. John Moran, of Crestline, who is a member of the local auxiliary requested and was granted a flag for the community service canteen for service men in Crestline.

Miss Dora McLeod, Pan American chairman, was in charge of the program at which George Lake, guest soloist sang "American Anthem" by Yeats, "Brazil" by Ary Barroso and "This is Worth Fighting For" by De Lange-Estep. Accompaniment was by Mrs. Rhea Mitchell.

The second half of the program, under the direction of Mrs. Ruth Kahl, who is the child welfare chairman, consisted of a talk by Russell Gimble, from the Friendly House. Mrs. Gimble talked on child welfare, day nurseries and juvenile delinquency.

An executive committee meeting will be held April 30 at the Legion home.

FLEET'S FORCE TESTS WEAPONS ON SECRET TRIP

Rear Admiral's Only Man on Cruiser Who Knows What Destination Is.

could see the splashes where the shells hit the surface.

Usually each afternoon our cruiser's seaplanes were catapulted into the air to conduct a patrol. It was a fascinating sight to watch.

The mechanism of the catapult is a secret, but it can be said that the planes whiz into the air with such suddenly accumulated speed that the observer, facing the tail, must double up in his cockpit, holding head in hands to cushion the shock of the launching.

The pilot, who faces forward, has a thick pad behind his head to help absorb the "belt" that comes with the launching. I asked Ensign Ustick how it feels to be literally shot into the air.

"First time, you just close your eyes and wait," he said. "When you open them, you're in the air. But after a while you get used to it, and you can watch yourself going all the way down the catapult."

Sometimes when the planes returned from their patrol there was a stiff wind and a choppy sea. The aircraft would have trouble landing, and bounced considerably as they taxied up to the ship to be retrieved. But the stout landing struts and pontoons stood up under the beating of the sea.

There is real seamanship in getting the small planes aboard the ship in bad weather. They pitch and roll wildly, and an expert hand on the controls is required to prevent the plane from running into the side of the cruiser.

One day on our own quarterdeck, sailors and marines lined up for an inspection by the captain. Soon, after an appropriate bugle call, the captain and his party, composed of the executive officer, the senior lieutenant and a yeoman, descended to the quarterdeck.

Even in wartime, it seems, inspections continue in the navy—although not so often.

On his way, the captain kept the yeoman busy taking notes, marking down critical comments on items which could bear improvement. That rubber footmat on the foot of the ladder on the forecastle deck was worn — it should be replaced. The captain bent over slightly and pointed at it with his finger, and the sailor hastily scribbled a note about this matter.

Watching all this from the forecastle deck, I found my interest straying back to the matter of our destination. I spotted the admiral emerging from his cabin and engaged him in conversation.

His reply to my questions about our destination was (with a smile):

"I know, but I'm not telling anybody."

The admiral asked if I would like to look at some maps of the battle area. We entered his cabin.

The admiral pointed out the vast distances lying between the United States and the L-shaped chain of Japanese bases that reaches out into mid-Pacific.

"The principal thing which people at home don't realize about this Pacific war," he said with a wave at the vast ocean space on the map, "is the immensity of distance."

"Because distances are so great, you spend most of your time, on an expedition like this, in going and coming—with actual aggressive action occupying only a very short time. You just get to your objective, hit, and turn around and get back as fast as you can."

Some days later, the ship's executive officer, Comdr. Gerald L. Schetky of Oregon, informed me that my "battle station" during any action is to be at a searchlight platform near the stern of the ship. I visited the spot to determine how well I might be able to see from there, the dangers of being hit with bomb fragments, or strafed by dive bombers.

"You'd better wear old clothes if you're going to be back here during an action," said a lieutenant on duty nearby. "Or you'll get doused with soot. The concussion of gunfire shakes down a regular shower of soot flakes from the funnel, all over this place. You'll see."

On the main deck of the cruiser, the ship's band was playing swing music. The music struck an incongruous note against a background of discussion on the subject of bomb fragments, gunfire concussion, etc.

(TOMORROW: The Hornet, Tokyo-bound, bombers ready, moves in closer.)

Yank Examines Shells Left By Fleeing Nazis

Looking over a collection of 170-mm. shells left by the Nazis in central Tunisia is Lieut. John Senseney, of St. Louis, Mo. They are fragmentation shells and are used principally against infantry and artillery positions. Speed of the Allied advance caused the Nazis to abandon them.

HAMBURGER GADGET INVENTORS NOW MAKING PARTS FOR PLANES

(By International News Service)

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Although they began their inventive careers with a machine for turning out the lowly hamburger pattie automatically, two students today are busily making parts for Army ordnance and aircraft plants.

In their Los Angeles laboratory, David Hagedorn, temporarily absent from the Los Angeles campus of the University of California, and Elias Blanco, late of the state college at Chihuahua City, Mexico, are working principally on new designs for electrical connections and aircraft fittings.

One of their developments is a direction indicator for airplanes.

Hagedorn is the son of the noted biographer of Theodore Roosevelt, Herman Hagedorn, and Blanco's father is Gen. Jose Blanco of Mexico.

GOT PARKING TICKETS

CHESTER, Pa. —(U.P.)— Frank D'Ambrosio, 34, a shipyard worker, spent a night in jail and paid a heavy fine for his indifference when policemen gave him a ticket 24 times for parking in a restricted area. Tickets or no, D'Ambrosio calmy told the magistrate, "I'm frequently late for work, so I just park in the first place I find."

RENT CURB NO SALES BARRIER, DIRECTOR SAYS

Regulations Intended Mainly To Prevent Unwarranted Eviction of Tenants.

Stressing that interference with bona fide home purchasing was not the intention of the rent program, Lester Redding, area rent director, today sought to correct what he termed "wholly misleading impressions" of rules on sales of rented homes.

He outlined five broad types of transactions to which such restrictions do not apply.

A landlord may sell a home, he detailed, where it appears that the tenant can move into equivalent accommodations without substantial hardships or loss, where the sale is to the present tenant, where the house to be sold is vacant, or in cases where the owner can show substantial necessity for selling or that applications of restrictions would cause him other special hardships.

Occasional evictions may result if restrictions are waived, he pointed out.

"Contrary to some wholly misleading impressions which seem to be circulating," Redding said, "we are not interested in stopping home purchasing or in prohibiting the sale of any piece of rental housing except where that sale would result in an unwarranted eviction.

"The main purpose of the sales provision of the maximum rent regulation is to stop sales which seek to evade maximum rent ceilings," he explained. "Our job is to control rents, to see that the workers who are making the tools of war, and the families of the men in service, are free from the fear of over-night eviction."

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

I don't know how Mansfielder Stan Partenheimer feels now about college baseball. Last time I saw him he was keen about lending his good left arm to the cause of the Wooster Scots, but the Scots let him down last week in a 1-3 loss to Muskingum in 13 innings.

Partenheimer took over the hill chores in the seventh inning, and in seven frames he fanned 17 Muskies.

But in the 13th, two errors, and a single, the only hit made off Stan's delivery, gave the Muskies two runs and the ball game.

But Partenheimer must be used to brilliant but futile efforts by now.

Bill McKee in the Ashland Times-Gazette tells about the time when Akron Buchtel high school, with Partenheimer as the star pitcher, came to Ashland for a ball game.

But Partenheimer didn't pitch Buchtel was in the thick of the Akron championship race, so the coach saved him for duty in center field.

"That was quite a mistake," pens McKee, "as Ashland pounded Buchtel's pitcher hard and ran up a big lead."

Outfielder Partenheimer persisted in wearing his windbreaker jacket, contrary to one of the game's rules, and at one stage in the game he came to bat wearing his jacket, and with the bases loaded.

"This," says McKee, "seemed to call for some strategic heckling, so Coach Sid Boyd of Ashland called the umpire's attention to the infraction, and Umpire Baldy McNabb ordered Stan to remove the jacket."

Stan declined.

"Take it off, or else," thundered McNabb in true arbiter fashion.

Rather than leave the game, Stan doffed the offensive raiment, and "this so upset him," McKee reports "that all Partenheimer could do was hit a home run, driving in four runs."

It didn't win the game, because Ashland's lead was long enough to absorb the four markers.

Coach Boyd wasn't interested any longer in Partenheimer's uniform, and would even have permitted him to wear "a zoot suit with a drape shape."

Derby Trial Mile Booked

Count Doesn't Try For Prelim Honors.

By SID FEDER

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(AP)—Derbyville put on the wartime version of its annual war paint today as 13 of the hopefuls got out their running shoes to shoot for a spot in Saturday's select Kentucky Derby set.

The Derby trial mile was on the card today, and that's the annual jumping off spot for the daffy doings that are topped off by the $75,000 scramble Saturday.

Count Fleet is the hottest Mr Big ever to grab at the Derby brass ring. He's one of the quartet of Saturday's likely starters who won't try for the trial pot.

With the Fleet charting a different course and the Derby itself looking more and more like a "buy me a place ticket affair, second place looms large for both today's preview and Saturday's main event. Most of the boys are about reconciled to the outlook that second money in the Derby is all they'll get. Second money is a net $8,000.

Warren Wright's Ocean Wave, Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' No Wrinkles, W. E. Boeing's duet of Slide Rule and Twoses, J. Graham Brown's Seven Hearts, Mrs. Henry L. Finch's Modest Lad and Eladio (Rochester) Anderson's Burnt Cork are all given a chance today as well as a look-in for the runner-up slot Saturday.

Baseball Openers Repeated

Season Gets Under Way In Remaining Cities.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(AP Sports Writer)

THE major leagues will undergo another attendance test from baseball fans, or vice versa, today as the National and American leagues present their "second openers," the home debuts of the clubs which have been on the road since the start of the season.

Advance estimates were that about 80,000 fans would turn out for the eight games and if the predictions are fulfilled baseball not only will have its biggest day of the spring, but will have a load lifted off its collective mind.

The schedule and the expected attendance:

National league — Boston at New York 15,000; Cincinnati at Pittsburgh 15,000; Chicago at St. Louis 10,000; Brooklyn at Philadelphia 7,000.

American league—St. Louis at Detroit 25,000; New York at Boston 10,000; Cleveland at Chicago 5,000; Philadelphia at Washington 4,000.

Up till now attendance at games has been far below expectations. The approximate total turnout for 27 ball games (doubleheaders counted as one, of course) has been 248,000 divided 126,400 in the National league for 13 dates and 121,600 in the American league for 14 dates.

That amounts to less than an average of 10,000 in spite of the fact that the figures include opening day, Saturday and Sunday—usually three peaks. Only two games, the inaugurals at Washington and Cincinnati, have drawn as many as 20,000 fans.

Baseball magnates are hopeful they can find the answer to the mystery of what has become of the almost fanatic followers who once flocked to their parks rain or shine, good teams or bad.

Two National league clubs, the Cincinnati Reds and the Phillies already have announced forthcoming experiments with morning games.

The Brooklyn Dodgers returned to the 1942 ball over the week-end. The New York Giants will use it today in their home opener with the raves at the Polo Grounds. The Pittsburgh Pirates, the Phillies, Reds and St. Louis Cardinals also have placed hasty orders for supplies of last year's balls and will put them in use as soon as they arrive.

The American league has stood pat on the Balata ball and President William Harridge said, when the discussion first opened last week, that his circuit would not deviate from the 1943 model under any circumstances.

Tellings Cop C-Loop Title

Ebbert and Sonner Tie For Pin Honors.

Tellings Sealtest won the championship of the Commercial "C" bowling league which closed its season last night at Colony alleys.

The Sealtests held a five-game margin over Sons of Herman.

H. Ebbert and R. Sonner tied for high total on closing night with marks of 588, while Oroch rolled high game of 221.

Golf Leagues Plan Meeting

May Operate as One Loop This Summer.

Fate of The News Journal golf leagues for the coming summer will be decided Thursday night when golfers from both the "A" and "B" leagues will meet at Possum Run at 7:30.

The meeting was called today by Secretary Carl Wiseman of the "A" league, since the "B" league is without a president and Al Heath, secretary, is working in Cleveland.

A recent check-up of golfers who played in the two leagues last summer showed there are only 36 players remaining from both organizations, enough to make one league. Some of these players are scheduled for army service early in the season.

Whether the golfers will operate as a single league this summer, or suspend for the duration will be the question before the house.

JAC Tournament Set For Week-end

Their sanctioning difficulties taken care of, bowlers of the Junior Chamber of Commerce will hold their state tournament this week-end as scheduled at Colony alleys.

An entry list of 17 teams has been obtained for the meet, and may be increased to 20. At present Columbus leads with five teams, Mansfield has four, Canton three, Toledo two, and Cleveland, Warren and Dayton one each.

* * *

Five-man event will be rolled off in two shifts Saturday night, with singles and doubles set for Sunday. A $75 prize list is augmented by cups, and merchandise prizes.

Gus Gremlin Adds His Help

Our old friend, "Gus Gremlin," helps us, and Eulace Peacock, put this this picture across. Eulace, former Temple university track star, figured he'd be able to broad jump far enough to win the Penn Relay title, but to make sure he called on "Gus" to give him that extra kick. "Gus" did, as you can see. Peacock leaped 24 feet 1 inch. He is a member of Manhattan Beach Coast Guard.

Mansfield Savings Keglers Take Lion's Share Of Honors

Mansfield Savings Bank keglers not only won the championship of the Club bowling league, but they walked off with the lion's share of special prizes awarded at the Southern hotel.

They took high single game with 1005, and fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh high game with scores of 991-991-979 and 970, and 10th high with 963. Optimist took second with 999, Kiwanis third with 995, and Liederkranz 8th and 9th with 969 and 965.

On high match, the Banker swept the first three places with 2921-2827-2812, and also won 6th with 2774, and 8th, 9th and 10th with 2747-2740-2739. American Legion rolled 2796 and 2795 for 4th and 5th, while Liederkranz took 7th with 2767.

Johnny Leppo posted high average for the season with 191.69 and Art Hilborn was second with 190.12. Leppo had the most games over 200 with 31, while Hilborn had 30, but Hilborn had the most series over 600, with seven, while Leppo had 6.

Carl Wiseman had high game with 266, with H. Doolittle second at 258, and Leppo and Hilborn tied for third at 256.

Dan Nagle rolled high series of 695, Hilborn at 681, and Leppo 676.

Danner Dalton was elected president of the league for next year and C. H. Saylor vice president. The office of secretary-treasurer was left open.

Six Golf Tourneys Cancelled

Three Other Ohio Jousts Threatened.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Ohio's competitive golf schedule for 1943 felt the full impact of the war today as a check-up showed that only one of the dozen annual fixtures was certain to be staged.

Six tournaments were announced as definitely off, three others as "probably suspended," and two others were in the uncertain stage.

Erased from the program were the ninth annual $7,500 inverness four-ball matches at Toledo, in which 16 of the country's top-flight professionals competed each year; the third annual $5,000 Mahoning Valley open at Youngstown, which has attracted the best of the "play for pay" contingent; the State Public Links championships for both men and women; the Ohio conference and the State Intercollegiate contests.

Dr. J. G. Love, board of governors member of the Ohio Golf association, said the board was being polled as to the possibility of holding that group's state amateur seniors and juniors tournaments.

"I am practically certain, from conversations I've had with other board members, that all three tournaments will be declared off for the duration," Dr. Love said. "I'm casting my vote against holding them."

Still on the tentative list are the Women's State championship event, and the annual Ohio Open, the latter sponsored by the Ohio section of the P.G.A. Officials of each association said their tournaments "had not been called off yet," but that they thought they might be.

That leaves only the State High School championships, scheduled May 21-22 at Ohio State University's course, among the competitive certainties on the Buckeye courses this year.

The Inverness and Mahoning Valley fixtures were erased by the action of the national governing groups curtailing such activities by the big-time professionals. The Public Links events were called off by Secretary Ray Pennell because "all our players are in the army or defense jobs," while the collegiate meets were hit by lack of manpower. Only two or three Ohio colleges have golf teams this year, and they are playing a modified slate.

With the competitive section of the gulf picture a thing of the past, district associations are turning to "war bond" and other tournaments. Under the plan, all courses in the area are thrown open for the day and the receipts go for the purchase of war bonds, or cigarets, athletic equipment or playing cards for the army camps.

Along with the other cancellations, Michigan State called off its match with Ohio State, scheduled Saturday, and Coach Bob Kepler of the Bucks is looking for another opponent.

Edwards Benched Against Southpaws, Hocket Gets Job

CHICAGO—(AP)—Oris Hockett, who was a regular in the Cleveland outfield last year, receives a chance to regain his job today when the Indians open a three-game series with the White Sox.

Manager Lou Boudreau announced Hockett would replace Hank Edwards in Center Field whenever the Tribe faces southpaw pitching and Thornton (Lefty) Lee is the sox mound choice today.

Hockett has been in the managerial dog house since he deserted the team during the exhibition season for a week-end trip to his Dayton, O., home. Boudreau would go no further than nominate Hockett for duty against left handers but it's a good guess he will remain in the lineup if he gets off to a good start.

Edwards has made two hits in 20 times at bat for an average of .100. That compares well enough with the work of some of his teammates, but it is hardly sufficient to keep on the bench a man who might do better.

Mel Harder, who dropped a 4 to 0 decision to Detroit in his first start, is the Tribe hurler in today's series opener.

REDS MEET BUCS

PITTSBURGH—(AP)—Ray Starr and Bob Klinger are the pitchers as the Cincinnati Reds help the Pittsburgh Pirates open their home season today, and Ray is content that the Pirates have no 1942 balls left over the must use the 1943 beanbag.

Ray, for all his 36 years, thinks he could be a 20-game winner with the dead ball. Since 20 dozen 1942 models are being expressed to the team, Ray will have to get along the best he can.

* * *

Gerald Walker will be the Reds' regular center fielder now that Mike McCormick has gone home before being inducted.

Tygers Travel To Columbus

Meet North Tomorrow Instead of Friday.

Mansfield high trackmen will travel to Columbus tomorrow for a meet with Columbus North instead of Friday, Coach Harry Mehock announced today.

The change in scredule was made late yesterday at the request of Coach Mike Hagely of North.

It will be the fourth track meeting between the two schools with Mansfield holding a 2-1 edge in the series. North defeated Columbus East by 18 points early in the season, and East barely edged Mansfield.

The Polar Bears are reported exceptionally strong in the field events, with three good broad jumpers, and with good discus and shot men.

The Tygers will take a full squad of 33 athletes to Columbus, and will have at least 30 in the Newark Relays Saturday, Mehock said.

Junior high trackmen will be in action Thursday at 4 p. m. at Stadium field, John Simpson meeting Lexington high school and holding a telegraphic meet with Clyde, while Johnny Appleseed will have a telegraphic meet with Columbus West.

CITES HIKE IN DELINQUENCY

Crawford Home Official Says Juveniles Problem In County.

GALION — That juvenile delinquency is becoming a major problem in the county was indicated in a talk by Marvin Adams, superintendent of the Crawford County Children's home who was speaker Monday night at a meeting of the Galion Rotary club.

Preceding the talk the club elected the following officers: president, Lawrence Bennett; vice president, Richard Patterson; secretary-treasurer, M. R. McCammon.

The speaker said that juvenile delinquency had increased 25 per cent throughout the country since Pearl Harbor. There is an alarming rise in delinquency among girls, he said, stressing the fact that the greatest increase is in prostitution among girls from the age of 12 years upwards, giving the war as a cause for this.

Enrollment at the Crawford County Children's home has increased too, Adams stated, due to conditions throughout the county, which, he said, do not exist in Galion.

He explained that the general public does not realize the situation existing in Crawford county regarding juvenile delinquency.

There are now 63 children at the home, no orphans being among the number. The children come from broken homes, illegitimacy and delinquency. He gave several case histories to illustrate his points.

STOCK LEADERS DROP SLIGHTLY IN EARLY MART

First Quarter Business of Department Stores Jump 12 Per Cent Over '42.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Prices of leading stocks edged slightly lower in today's early market transactions.

Off fractionally at a moderately active opening were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Goodrich, Kennecott and Woolworth.

A constructive trend indicator was seen in the federal reserve survey indicating the nation's department store sales in the first three months of 1943 exceeded those of the comparable period a year ago by 12 per cent.

THEATERS

Foils Nazis.

Nancy Coleman is practically making a career out of thwarting the Nazis. In every picture since her debut in "Kings Row," she has found herself engaged in tilting with the "Superman," much to the "superman's" detriment. The actress currently is leading her wiles to the Norwegian underground in "Edge Of Darkness," currently at the Ohio. Therein, Miss Coleman starts out on the side of the Nazi, but before the final fadeout Nancy gets around to knifing a Nazi or two. Co starred in the picture are Errol Flynn and Ann Sheridan. Walter Huston also plays a leading role along with Judith Anderson, Francis Pierlot and Art Smith.

Tropic Background.

A mythical South Seas island, pre-war, provides the setting for Universal's new picture, "Rhythm of the Islands," coming tomorrow to the Madison. Jane Frazee and Allan Jones are co-starred. The supporting cast includes Andy Devine, Mary Wickes, the Step Brothers and the Horton dancers. The musical score features the presentation of seven popular songs. Ray William Neill directed the picture. Co-attraction at the Madison is "Quiet Please, Murder," starring George Sanders.

PRICE CONTROL PANEL CHECKED

Mansfield To Have Group With Duties To Check on Retail Prices.

ing the visit of A. H. Anderson, district price officer of the Cleveland regional office, who is scheduled to come to Mansfield Tuesday to confer with ration officials relative to the proposed set-up.

Districts not already organized will do so within the next two weeks, Price Executive Edward C. Welsh, of the regional office reported.

"On the principle that the majority of the people do not want inflation and that they are willing to pitch in and fight it, the OPA has made provision through the institution of these panels for the people to contribute their time and energies in keeping prices down," Welsh explained.

Responsibilities of the panels will include informing retailers of developments in price regulations, receiving and investigating complaints of violations and informing the OPA of community problems.

"This community front against inflation will not be a policing organization," Welsh emphasized, adding "it will not be set up to snoop or annoy merchants who are attempting to do business under the inconvenience of price control."

Panel members will be educated in their jobs through district meeting, the price executive said.

15,000 QUIT COAL PITS IN WAGE DISPUTE

Nationwide Strike Expected In 72 Hours as Work Stoppages Spread.

based on the union assumption that miners would be guilty of trespassing if they stepped on mine property without a contract.

Intervention By FDR Held Likely

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Every indication in Washington today pointed toward a nationwide coal strike within the next 72 hours.

It was believed that only direct intervention by President Roosevelt could prevent a walkout which not only would throw 450,000 soft coal miners into idleness but ultimately force every steel mill and munitions plant in the country to shut down.

The War Labor Board, meanwhile, awaited the outcome of a meeting of the policy committee of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers union in New York during the day before "cracking down" on the miners.

But the spread of strikes in the coal fields raised the prospect that the WLB would refuse to consider the dispute and would turn the case over to President Roosevelt which would hasten the possibility of regular army troops being used to end the walkouts.

Lewis declined to comment on the board's appeal to halt the strikes and its action in appointing a panel to begin hearings in the case Wednesday.

The panel was set up after Lewis, who has opposed WLB action in the dispute, snubbed the board's request to submit recommendations for the labor membership of the panel.

David B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and one of the representatives of railway labor on President Roosevelt's labor cabinet, was picked as the panel's labor member. Other members of the panel are:

Public member and chairman, Morris Llewellyn Cooke, a Philadelphia management engineer with a wide background of service in utility disputes.

Employer member — Walter White, one time deputy administrator of NRA, and a special mediation representative of the WLB.

Will Strike Reach Ohio? They Wonder

MARTINS FERRY — (INS) — Eastern Ohio's 15,000 miners and mine operators sat on a "powder keg" today wondering if strikes in western Pennsylvania would spread to this section.

Operators, already plagued by manpower shortages, would only say "anything can happen." A general strike in the Ohio coal producing district would mean a loss of approximately 2,000,000 tons of coal a month and would mean crippling of vital war industries in the midwest.

Six More Mines Close In Kentucky

HARLAN, Ky. — (UP) — Workers voted today to suspend operations at six additional mines, bringing to 3,500 the number of Harlan county coal miners who have walked off jobs demanding a new union contract be signed at New York.

Although no official statement was made by the United Mine Workers union, leaders said the men would not return to work until the Appalachian coal contract negotiations at New York are completed. Nearly 2,000 men were involved in today's walkout.

Notice Forecasts Alabama Strike

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(INS)—Officials of District 20, United Mine Workers of America, today informed operators that the temporary agreement under which Alabama mines are now operated would become ineffective Friday midnight.

With the notice that the temporary agreement was being cancelled arose the possibility of a general strike in the Alabama coal field.

Pennsylvania Area Seethes With Unrest

PITTSBURGH — (INS) — With 10,000 men already idle in nearly a score of district coal pits, the western Pennsylvania Bituminous field seethed with unrest today as the miners awaited formal instructions from the United Mine Workers' policy committee in New York this afternoon.

The sporadic walkouts, meanwhile, were costing an estimated 50,000 tons of war-vital coal per day, and a further spread of the paralyzing strikes with an even higher tonnage loss, was feared.

Steel officials, with sub-normal supplies of coal above ground, regarded the walkouts as a grave threat to continued production of vital war materials. Although most of the major manufacturers had from two weeks' to a month's reservoir of coal, there were some operators that had as little as ten days' supply on hand. Spokesmen indicated that production would be hampered within three days curtailed in a wee' if the strikes continue that long.

District union officials blamed the stoppages on local grievances and the collapse of contract negotiations between the Appalachian Operators' association and the UMW, as well as certification of the dispute to the war labor board. Mine leaders have denounced the WLB frequently as a "packed court," and a "national cemetery for labor cases."

MANSFIELD NEWS IN BRIEF

Sparks Ignite Roof — Firemen from Central station put out a roof blaze shortly before 8 p. m. Monday at the home of B. A. Landon, 811 Maple street. Damage was slight.

FIRE, EXPLOSION HIT PORTSMOUTH

Firemen Battle Blaze at Shoe Factory; Man Injured In Gas Main Blast.

(By International News Service)

PORTSMOUTH—A two alarm fire, that kept the entire Portsmouth fire department in action for more than three hours, today damaged the plant of the Selby Shoe company of Portsmouth.

Damage to the company, one of the largest manufacturers of women's shoes in the country, was estimated at $10,000 by N. B. Griffin, general manager.

The fire, discovered by a watchman, apparently originated in the cleaning department on the third floor of a new building and spread to stacks of imitation leather, sending out billows of smoke that hampered firemen. Six firemen were partly overcome Fire Chief Robert Leedom announced.

The heaviest loss, according to Griffin, was caused by water in the repairing and pattern department on the second floor, the office on the ground floor and leather stocks and machinery in the basement. The cause of the blaze has been undetermined, he said.

PORTSMOUTH—(INS)—An explosion, believed caused by gas from an open line coming in contact with an open fire in a forge, today caused damage estimated at several hundred dollars to the filtration plant of the Portsmouth water works.

James Evans, 65, Sciotoville, was taken to General hospital, suffering second and third degree burns of the hands and face.

FAIR ENOUGH--

By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—I have collected some more information on the subject of margarine and the restrictive taxes thereon, state and federal, and, while the case seems not to contain the ingredients that crusades are made of it plainly amounts to a Grade B outrage and calls for relief. As I told you some time ago, the federal government collects a tax of one-fourth of a cent a pound on margarine at the factory and a license tax of $6 a year from each dealer in the uncolored product which looks like lard and is unappetizing to the eye, and 19 states have various taxes, some as high as 15 cents a pound. That is the rate in Wisconsin, which is a dairy state and was the source of much of the strength of the lobby against margarine many years ago. In addition, Wisconsin taxes the manufacturer of margarine within her borders $1,000 a year and the wholesaler and retailer $500 and $25, respectively.

Pegler

And the federal government collects 10 cents a pound on margarine colored before sale to the consumer and a license tax of $48 from retailers of precolored marge. This tax on precoloring has an obvious purpose. The idea is to make margarine unsightly and discourage people from using it. There would be just as good reason to forbid the coloring of butter because natural butter most of the year is very pallid and that rich golden complexion is a cosmetic effect achieved by the use of the same kind of vegetable dye that is provided for margarine.

The insincerity of the law in this respect is plain in the fact that when you buy uncolored margarine you can get a little shot of that yellow dope with it without having to pay the extra tax. If you color your own, you may do so free, and this means that congress and the state legislatures were not worried about the people's health but about the dairyman's profits. These dairymen are not little two-cow farmers whose wives churn up a small crock of butter and take it down to the store to trade for soda-crackers and calico.

They are big business, like the packers and other processors who make the margarine, but right now they are just millions of pounds behind the requirements for our own fighting forces and civilians and lend-lease and so on. They have all the business they can handle but still, for their benefit and for no other reason, the people have to pay a tax on a necessity which in some cases is proportionately as heavy as the taxes on whisky and cigarets.

There was a bill in the Wisconsin legislature a week or two ago which would have reduced the tax per pound from 15 cents to 8 and the manufacturers,' wholesalers' and retailers' license taxes to $300, $100 and $5, respectively. I don't know what happened to it, but I wouldn't give such a bill more than a prayer in Wisconsin.

As to the food values of margarine and butter you can pick a fight with a margarine man or a dairyman any time. However, the margarine people are proudly publicizing a report on butter substitutes by the committee on public health relations of the New York Academy of Medicine which claims that margarine, fortified with Vitamin A, is nutritionally equal to butter and recommending that all restrictive federal and state laws be suspended for the duration "of the butter crisis," meaning, no doubt, the duration of the war.

A man who says he spent six years campaigning for margarine says I may have a national scandal by the tail in reporting as I did some time ago that the federal government has been buying margarine for the army because says he, for years and years the dairy lobby has stuck into every war department appropriation bill a rider forbidding the use of any funds so appropriated for the purchase of oleo.

Well, just the same, Thomas E. Wilson, president of the Wilson company, packers, told me in Chicago a few weeks ago that he had delivered 25 carloads to the army in the last week and that the government was expecting to buy from 100 million to 110 million pounds for all purposes this year.

Well, and then an advertising man who represents two of the butter accounts in the country says the trouble with the margarine people is that they have always tried to represent margarine as a substitute for butter, which, he says, it isn't. He can take that up with the academy of medicine, because if the term "nutritionally equal" doesn't mean that margarine is a substitute I don't know my words.

He also complains that the margarine people imitate butter by coloring it yellow and asks why they don't color it red. Well why do the butter people imitate by coloring it yellow? Why don't they use red?

URBAN GROUPS BACK BRICKER ON REPEALER

Columbus and Cleveland Units Call For Action Lifting Tax on Meals.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — The Columbus and Cleveland Republican delegations in the Ohio house of representatives today line up behind Gov. John W. Bricker who is seeking a vote on the bill to remove the sales tax from food served by restaurants.

The six Columbus Republicans endorsed the bill.

The Cleveland statement asked the taxation committee to report out the sales tax measure so it could be voted on by the house.

Last week the nine Republican members from Cincinnati announced opposition to the bill.

Meanwhile, House Speaker William M. McCulloch said a caucus of the house's 110 Republicans probably would be held today or tomorrow to consider the governor's request for a vote on the measure, which was passed by the senate Jan. 26.

Some house Republicans feel the taxation committee is bound by the Republicans' caucus action of April 7, which Speaker McCulloch said was unanimously against further action on the bill.

The Columbus Republican members issued a statement last night saying the state treasury easily could stand a $5,000,000 a year reduction in revenues, or the estimated yield of the sales tax on restaurant food.

The senate last night rescinded its passage of a bill creating a 15-member post-war program commission.

The senate passed a house-approved bill allowing minors under the age of 17 to use firearms in marksmanship training and in hunting when accompanied by an adult.

The senate refused to concur in house amendments to a measure permitting previously licensed members of the armed forces to operate an automobile without a driver's license.

The house killed a bill proposing to classify hatcheries as an agricultural enterprise, a measure some members contended was intended to exempt hatcheries from unemployment insurance taxes.

The house passed a bill increasing from $1.50 a day to $3.00 the amount of fines prisoners may work out in jail. The measure now goes to the senate.

PLAN MARKERS AS PEDESTRIAN BLACK-OUT AID

OCD to Paint Parking Meters, Part of Lamp Posts White To Guide Traffic.

Pedestrians in Mansfield's downtown district will have markers to guide them during future blackouts under a plan which had been agreed upon today by city air raid wardens and Mayor W. J. Locke.

Parking meters, the lower part of lamp posts, railings, steps and other objects that extend into the sidewalk will be painted white by wardens to make the objects visible to pedestrians. C. A. Boughton, senior warden of the Eagles lodge post on North Main street, will be in charge of painting steps and railings while city workers will paint the parking meters.

Women employes in the business district will be organized into an auxiliary wardens' unit under the direction of Zone Warden T. C. Davis. After a period of training the women will be placed in charge of air raid shelters and first air stations, and will serve as wardens in business places.

Russell Gimbel, warden at the Friendly House post, was placed in charge of raid precautions in the district east from Mulberry street to the Pennsylvania railroad and from Fifth street north to the B. and O. railroad. He will be assisted by John Schuster.

In charge of activities in the downtown district will be J. G. Blahnik, head warden at the Montgomery Ward store post; Maurice Marquis at the Marquis Printing company post, and Albert Arnold, Kobacker's store wardens' post.

Plans are being completed for a school for wardens on gas bombs and air raid warning instruction. The school will be in charge of Senior Warden J. J. Whalen, manager of Kresge's Dollar store, while Harry Constance will be the instructor.

In a move to make the Mansfield business area one of the best equipped in Ohio from the standpoint of defense against air attack, merit award banners will be given senior air raid wardens who equip their posts according to state regulations. The merit award program is in charge of James D. Gaff of the Ohio Public Service company.

ON BROADWAY--

By Dorothy Kilgallen

ONE of the Sardi set's most frequent topics of conversation these afternoons is the return to Broadway—after 10 years of absence and illness—of Vincent Youmans, the gifted composer whose musical scores were brightened by some of the best-lovel melodies in the memory of the Great White Way.

Youman's hard-won triumph over the disease which quelled his talent for so long is an example of no-kidding, this-is-real drama that captures the interest and imagination of show folk. The greatest specialists had agreed, grimly, that all the odds were against him. But Youmans accepted their opinions as a challenge rather than a verdict, and his success in confounding the experts has given the Main Stem a thrill—the kind of kick you get in a race track grandstand when the longshot whizzes out of nowhere and leaves the favorite in a cloud of dust.

Kilgallen

But that is not the only reason why Youmans is the target for so much verbiage in the midtown meeting places these days. The drama pages have announced that when he resumes his activities on Broadway, Vincent's role will be that of producer rather than his accepted one of composer. His ambitious plan is to produce three widely varied types of shows, putting them into rehearsal in quick succession—and not one with a song by Vincent Youmans.

This is really something for the boys to mull over, and they're mulling. It is one thing, the "show me" experts argue, to be able to pull a lilting tune out of the ivories, and it is quite another thing to build a show from scratch and make it click with the critics and the public.

Does he know what audiences go for? Has he a flair for finding talent? Will he be able to sit in a bleak, empty theater as dozens of nominees for fame do their stuff, and sense immediately the ones who can't miss against those who just miss?

That's what the boys want to know, and there are two ladies in Hollywood who could give them an interesting answer. They are pretty sure that Youmans is a sure-fire spotter of star material.

It was a coincidence that both these ladies happened to hit the Big Street at the same time, back in 1923, and the well-known long arm reached out even further to place both aspiring young actresses in the Knickerbocker theater on the same afternoon. Auditions were being held for the Henry W. Savage production of "The Leftover," for which Vincent Youmans had written the score.

The ladies—they were very young girls then—were totally obscure and inexperienced. One had gleaming, rich red-gold hair, the other was a brunet with a cameo profile and an air of elegance inconsistent with her lack of importance.

Scores of singers stood awaiting their turns and smiling hopefully from the barren stage that day, but these two caught and held the attention of Youmans. He looked, listened and lost interest in all the other. And although the red-head and the brunet had never before worked in a show, the composer insisted that Savage hire them both for fairly good parts—and he admits now that he put some of his loveliest songs into the mouths of these babes on Broadway.

He wasn't wrong that time about what the public wanted. Just ask the Hollywood mailman who totes their fan letters. Because the red-head was Jeanette MacDonald, and the elegant brunet was Irene Dunne.

IN HOLLYWOOD--

By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Love may or may not ruin digestion, but you'll find plenty of stars in the film capital who are convinced that digestion certainly ruins love.

Many actors and actresses, whose kisses—languid or fiery, according to dictates of the script—set the pace for things romantic on the silver screen, are convinced an individual must be actually hungry to be able to make love superbly.

Coons

Mae West and Acquanetta, the Indian actress, don't think so, but quick affirmative votes come from such players as Charles Boyer, Barbara Stanwyck, Deanna Durbin, Dorothy Lamour, Maria Montez, Constance Bennett, Robert Cummings and Diana Barrymore.

They all swear by an empty stomach as a good stimulant for romance.

Boyer, who has made perhaps as many feminine hearts fly in formation as any other screen actor, is a staunch believer in wooing before eating.

"One cannot think of love-making while meditating on the wonderful steak that has just been consumed," says the French romanticist.

For comely Deanna, a little tea and a sandwich is preferred as a mid-day repast if she faces an afternoon of sophisticated love scenes.

When Miss Stanwyck turns on her screen allure, she does it on black coffee. It used to be a dozen cups a day. But that was in pre-ration days.

Miss Bennett is a strong believer in celery eating before her love scenes. Cummings sticks to half an order of toast and jam, while orange juice and a sweet roll are favorites of Miss Barrymore.

Miss Montez, who puts a goodly quantity of fire before the cameras, does it with a small fruit salad, while the queen of the sarong, Miss Lamour, stands by her "jungle lunch" of papaya and a slice of pineapple.

And from the ranks of director comes this recommendation from Frenchman Jean Renoir:

"Certainly an empty stomach is the immediate answer to realistic love-making. Afterward—that's another matter. But when a young man proposes, he should do so before dinner."

Asquanetta, who has been partaking of a Venezuelan diet for several years, believes, however, that hot foods of the South American variety are responsible for much of the reputed Latin love technique.

"I keep right on eating those invigorating dishes—and plenty of them," admits this dark-skinned beauty.

And Miss West, exponent of such culinary fundamentals as three squares a day of meat and potatoes, still sticks to the full-diet argument.

"How can you make love on an empty stomach?" asks the buxom blond, and dismisses the subject forthwith.

Which probably is as good a place as any to leave it.

FCC STANDS PAT

Refuses To Dismiss Two Men Charged With Subversion.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The federal communications commission stood 4 to 3 today against the recommendation of a house appropriations subcommitee that it dismiss two of its employes for alleged "subversive" activities and termed the recommendation unconstitutional, inexpedient and unjustified.

The committee, headed by Rep. John A. Kerr, D., N. C., found William E. Dodd, jr., and Goodwin Watson "unfit" for government service.

The FCC said that there was "no basis or reason" for their dismissal, defended their loyalty to this country, indicted the subcommittee for attempting to tar and feather the men for crimes which had not been proven in courts.

MAYOR STUDIES RELIEF DATA

Reserves Decision After State Inspector Gives Him Figures To Compare Costs.

Mayor W. J. Locke declined to comment today on Richland county relief administration figures submitted to him yesterday by Mrs. Marian Brucker, state welfare department investigator, explaining that he wanted to study provisions of the relief agreement between the city and county before deciding whether it is possible to bring about further reductions in the cost of relief administration.

Comparative figures for other sections of the state submitted yesterday by Mrs. Brucker at a session with the mayor and Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff showed the county before April 1 was spending more than 19 per cent of its relief money for administration.

The cost percentage was among the highest in the state, although Clark county (Springfield) topped it with 23 per cent. Other counties dropped as low as nine per cent. The state has set 12 per cent as an average.

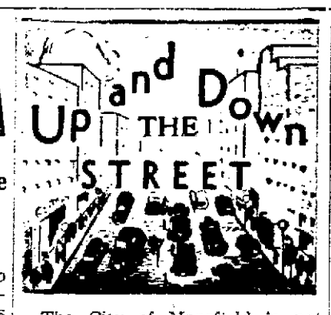
When the county commissioners recently lopped off $205 a month from the administration expense by furloughing two workers they dropped the percentage several points, however, and that decrease wasn't shown in the figures turned over yesterday to the city. The reduction will not show until the cost sheet for May is prepared since the two workers will remain on the payroll until May 1.

Mayor Locke said today that the steady drop in the number of relief cases in the past year in the face of slightly increased administration costs to April 1 prompted the cost check with Mrs. Brucker.

The county took over the relief administration three years ago under an agreement with the city which provided that the city and county share the costs of administration. The mayor said today he had no recent figures showing what percentage of the cost the city pays, and he wanted to obtain them from City Auditor Paul L. Kelley before making any recommendations for changes in the administration set-up.

STRIKE DEFERRED

CANTON, O.—(U.P.)—City street, water and garbage department employes affiliated with the CIO State, County and Municipal Workers of America have voted to defer a strike scheduled for today.



The City of Mansfield is not in the farming business, but it's going to follow the example of Richland county farmers and start planting trees to preserve and beautify its land. An order for 100 pine trees has already been turned in to the Richland County Fish and Game Protective association for trees to plant on the city's water supply holdings along the Clear Fork in the southern part of the county. Convinced that it won't do any harm to experiment with tree plantings, Mayor W. Locke said other trees probably will be obtained later to help cover the hills that provide water for the city wells. The state conservation division is urging the use of trees as a soil and water conservation measure and to afford cover for wildlife.

What has the moon to do with planting peas in a Victory garden? That is the question Clerk of Courts Howard Wenning would like to have answered. For some reason, the moon or another, he has had difficulty in that his seed peas are popping from the ground. Friends told him it was the wrong phase of the moon for planting, but Thomas Hoffman, who planted the same day and under the same lunar conditions, had no such difficulties. Could be that the depth of the two plantings, one a half inch and the other two inches, had something to do with it, they finally agreed.

CHECKING CLUE IN OHIO MURDER

Link Report on Three Negroes To Slaying of Waitress In Cincinnati Hotel.

CINCINNATI — Cincinnati police today were investigating a new clue in their search for the slayer of blond Sophia Baird, a 20-year-old waitress who was murdered early Sunday in the hallway outside of her third floor hotel room.

Robert Puckett, Middletown, reported to the Middletown police force that he saw three Negroes acting peculiarly when he passed the Biltmore hotel, where the girl was brutally slain. Puckett disclosed that this was at about the time of the murder.

Detective Chief Clem Merz said that except for the fact that the suspect was a Negro, his detectives had no clue to the slayer's identity.

More than 48 hours have elapsed since the former Elk Valley, Tenn. girl's body was found stabbed and slashed while detectives have been attempting to establish whether any act, unintentional or otherwise on the slain girl's part might have led a Negro to believe that she had no qualms about racial barriers.

Police questioned Miss Baird's roommate, Miss Mildred Sharpe and other friends of the girl but so far they have not uncovered anything to show that the girl had even the slightest association with her slayer.

Meanwhile, police were attempting to ascertain when an attack upon a 26-year-old housewife could have been perpetrated by the same Negro. Mrs. May McKinney notified authorities that a man answering somewhat the description of Miss Baird's slayer had attacked her at her home. Mrs. McKinney said the Negro fled when she screamed.

ILLNESS FATAL

Mrs. Hattie Murphy, 73, Former Mansfielder, Succumbs.

Mrs. Hattie Deemer Murphy, 74, former resident of Mansfield, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Alfred Mumford in Columbus Monday afternoon following a long illness.

Mrs. Murphy was born in Greensburg, Pa., June 22, 1868, coming to Mansfield in 1914 where she made her home until going to Columbus five years ago. She was a member of the United Brethren church here.

Surviving are her daughter, two sons, Albert D. Murphy, salesman for the Tracy and Avery company here, and Joseph O. Murphy of Lakeville, a brother, Oliver Deemer, Greensburg, Pa., and four grandchildren.

The body was removed to the Finefrock funeral home where services will be conducted Wednesday at 3 p. m. Burial will be in Mansfield cemetery.

ALLIED ADVANCE STRIKES CLOSE TO TUNIS ROAD

Germans Lose 80 Tanks In Fierce Armored Clash In Tunisia.

more than 1,000 sorties in an air offensive which the announcement said was of "increasing intensity."

Armored spearheads of the British jabbing southeast of Goubellat threatened to cut off the big supply base of Pont Du Fahs, 34 miles southeast of Tunis, which already was menaced by the much-feared Moroccan Goumiers who had driven northeast along the Tunisian Dorsal to a hill overlooking the town.

The Goumiers "went like smoke" in their push on Pont Du Fahs from the southeast yesterday, front line dispatches said, and were within two miles of the objective.

The tank battle here appeared to be the key to the great fight raging all along the front.

In the wild and deadly action First army armored columns had reached one point only four miles from the supply road running northeast of Pont Du Fahs, and a second column had battered its way to within six miles of the artery.

Among 20 enemy tanks destroyed in the battle in which the Germans were believed to have committed all or most of their armored reserves were five 60-ton Tigers.

The day's most spectacular air blow was struck by Flying Fortresses which made their longest flight of the North African campaign and bombed Grosseto flying field, 90 miles northwest of Rome to give Il duce a hint of bombings to come.

Loosing hundreds of fragmentation bombs in two waves over the airdrome, the Fortresses scattered destruction among parked planes, and smashed buildings at the reserve German air force base.

In unison with British First army and American advances, the British Eighth army infantry too made "slight advances" in difficult hill fighting, a spokesman said.

But the main theaters were on the Axis' western flank where British Churchill tanks had been used in some cases to climb peaks 2,000 feet high and support the infantry.

The American advance in the Jefna area, too, was against "extremely difficult resistance," with the German rearguards leaving heavy minefields behind to cover their general retreat.

But the Americans were reported making progress in the valley east of Sedjenane and west of Lake Achkel, whose western shore is only 17 miles west of Bizerte.

The fierce armored battle in the Goubellat area southeast of Medjez-El-Bab was said to be still under way with the British continuing to make headway "against desperate opposition."

The British Eighth army also made further gains yesterday on the western end of the Axis southern flank.

The British took 260 prisoners in occupying the important holdout position north of Medjez-El-Bab.

Two ships were sunk and others left burning when light aerial forces staged assaults on enemy shipping.

Altogether 11 enemy planes were shot down yesterday, compared with 11 missing Allied aircraft, the announcement said.

(The Italian communique, broadcast by the Rome radio and recorded by the Associated Press, asserted that Axis troops had gone over to the counter-attack in several places in the western sector after staving off powerful Allied infantry and armored forces' drives.

(In the air raid on Grosseto, the Italians declared that bombs and machine-gun strafing caused "great damage to civilian buildings among which were a Red Cross hospital and a kindergarten." Two Allied planes were shot down by anti-aircraft batteries, the Italians said.

(The bulletin also said that Bari, Augusta and Trant, and San Antioco were raided by multi-engined bombers, five of which were shot down by anti-aircraft.

(It was announced by the Middle East air command at Cairo that a strong force of United States Air Force heavy bombers left fires burning after blasting the airdrome at Bari.

(Quoting "authoritative quarters," a Berlin broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, said the "Anglo-American large-scale attack on the western flank of Axis positions in Tunisia has failed," and declared the British had lost 193 tanks in four days of fighting.)

U. S. Liberators 'Clear' Airdrome

CAIRO — (AP) — A heavy concentration of American Liberators dropped a quarter million pounds of high explosives yesterday on the Bari airdrome in southern Italy, a key assembly point for Axis aircraft.

"I would be surprised if a single plane was left intact on the ground," a bombardier of one of the bombers said. Bari is 50 miles north of the Taranto naval base and is on the Adriatic sea.

A communique today said hits were scored on hangars and grounded aircraft. Pilots said the raid was devastating.

Russians Step Up Air Blows In Kuban

MOSCOW—(AP)—Aviation activity had reached a new fury on the Soviet-German front today as Russians, with increased air strength, continued to blast Nazi forward and rear positions and communications.

The most intensive action still was in the Kuban region of the Caucasus.

Red Star, the army newspaper, said that following great air losses, the German air activity in the Kuban slackened after April 22 but Russian activity increased.

Observers asserted the Red air force had struck the German air arm such a sudden and heavy blow in the Kuban that Hitler's whole plan of air support for the Kuban counterattack has collapsed, at least for the present.

his new found friends in Mansfield.

Johnny—who cautioned the sheriff to direct all mail to him in his true name of "Joseph Pertz"—asked that he be remembered to all his friends, particularly attaches and friends of the Salvation Army. "Tell the whole Salvation Army 'hello' for me," he concluded after enumerating most of its residents by name.

Mindful of the gifts and kindness of sheriff's officers, "Johnny" voiced thanks to the "fellows" and reiterated his promise to Sheriff and Mrs. Robinson that "I will come back to visit you as soon as I'm 16 and I'll help with the dishes then." The boy had previously begged to wash dishes and do household chores in payment for his future lodging there.

SALES SLOWER

Liquor Store Says Supplies Last Longer Under Plan.

"Stooge" buyers were eliminated and waiting lines were shorter at the Mansfield liquor store yesterday went into the new zone plan of buying went into effect, but sales were not fewer.

Estimating that not more than 10 per cent of the customers were turned away because of inadequate means of identification and residence outside the one the store serves, attaches said it was 3:30 p. m. before they sold the last of their supply alloted for sale yesterday.

Social security cards alone no longer will be considered as means of identification, clerks pointed out, since state social security directors have called to their attention the fact that many cards are not issued in the correct name and address of the bearer.

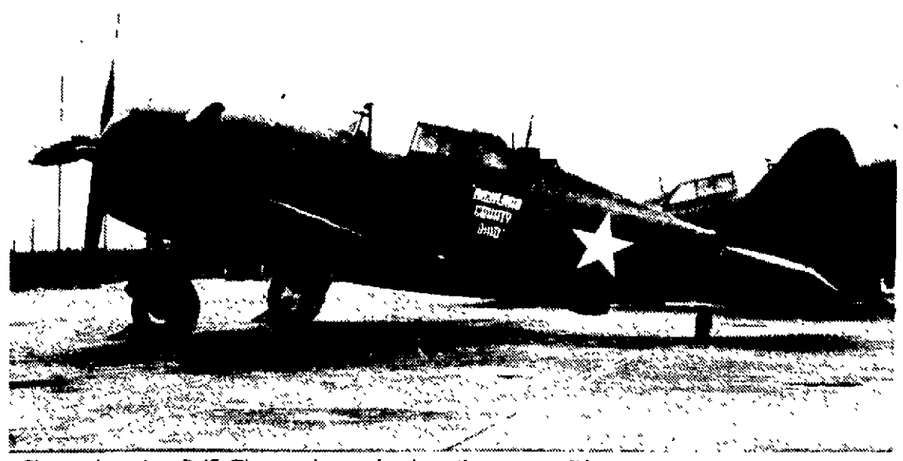
Pursuit Ship Richland Women 'Bought'



Shown above is a P-47, Thunderbolt pursuit ship, purchased through the bond selling efforts of the women's division of the Richland county war bond drive organization last November. Striving to sell enough bonds to buy a bomber, the women did not only that but had enough left over to purchase a pursuit ship in addition. During the second War Loan drive now in progress the women's division has set as its goal the "outfitting of an outfit" and hopes to sell enough bonds to completely equip 1,000 fighting men. The pursuit ship has been named "Richland County, Ohio" as is indicated in the picture just received in Mansfield.

SEES ATTEMPT TO BOMB OHIO

State Defense Director Says Raids Likely as Aid To Axis Home Morale.

boost morale at home. An air raid on American cities might serve as a shot-in-the-arm to his people. then, too, a raid would give a spectacular touch to the Nazi war effort and, it is believed, delude other nations into thinking that Germany remains a powerful force despite recent reverses. In that connection, German and Italian newspapers have been urging air raids on the United States.

4. Hitler hates America and all that it stands for. If a raid would curtail operations of a major war production plant or kill a few of the leaders directing the nation's war program, it would be a success.

5. Germany has produced planes large enough to cross the Atlantic and return. Ideal flying weather will accompany spring and summer. American observers reported that Hitler and Mussolini may have discussed an air attack on the United States at their recent Brenner Pass conference.

Ohio is considered by Washington officials as definitely a potential target area inasmuch as it has 1,000 industrial plants, considered essential by the army, employing 200 or more workers.

Recent statistics place the number of Ohioans working in war industries at 1,000,000. In other words, one person in every six is employed in some occupation which contributes directly to America's war effort.

Hitler always has done the unexpected and his threats to bomb Atlantic seaboard cities may be so much talk designed to catch midwestern industrial areas off guard.

Sities on Lake Erie as well as Columbus, Dayton, Cincinnati, Youngstown and Steubenville have long been recognized as potential industrial bombing targets.

From German bases established in Norway, Ohio cities are much closer in air line miles to enemy nations than New York, Boston, Philadelphia or Baltimore. The army believes that enemy raiders would fly over the Arctic circle in conducting an attack on the United States. This course with little variance would put them in the vicinity of Detroit, Cleveland, Toledo, Sandusky, Conneaut, Girard, Youngstown, Akron, Ravenna and Canton.

Ohio's importance in America's war production program goes without question. The Axis would be helped considerably if any of Ohio's industrial plants were compelled to curtail operations for any length of time.

It is important, therefore, that we prepare for any eventuality. We are not immune from attack and we may awaken some morning to find that the possibility of an air raid has turned into a grim reality.

Knox Calls Raids On Coasts Possibility

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Secretary of the Navy Knox said today there is "always a chance" of enemy nuisance air raids on either the east or west coast of the United States, but he considers the possibility of such raids remote.

Knox was asked at a press conference whether the Japanese might employ their projected air base on Kiska island, at the tip of the Aleutians chain, at a base for attacking the west coast by air.

He considers it remote, he explained, because of improved American defenses, the fact that "we're engaging the enemy elsewhere," and because the Japs "are already spread pretty thin."

Knox added that the country must assume the possibility of air attack remarking "it is not safe for us to do anything else."

U. S., Britain Confer In Effort To Restore Polish-Soviet Diplomatic Relations.

but they, too, agreed that an early rapprochment was possible.

Britain already was taking steps to bring about a reconciliation.

Moscow dispatches said the Russians long had been watching anti-Soviet activities on the part of Poles in certain foreign countries, but took no official cognizance so long as the campaign remained unofficial.

The break came when the Polish government committed itself by asking the International Red Cross to investigate German propaganda charges that the Russians murdered 10,000 Polish near Smolensk in 1940 without asking a Soviet reply. The Russians claim that the Poles were slain by the Germans.

Pole-Russ Break Blow To Allied Diplomacy

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The rupture of Polish-Russian Diplomatic relations was realistically viewed today as a major defeat for President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill's diplomacy if for no other reason than it will comfort the Axis.

It came at a moment when Washington apparently was moving further to appease the Soviet Union with a major diplomatic rebuff to Finland—a state with which Russia is at war and the United States is at peace. There are unconfirmed rumors that the United States is about to break relations with the Finns.

While the state department "regretted" the Polish-Russian break, some others thought it was grounds for even more emphatic expressions of diplomatic sorrow. Sen. Theodore F. Green, D., R. I., considered it "tragic" and other congressional commentators expressed misgivings.

ONE RELEASED

Soldier Poser Freed, Another A. W. O. L. Waits Return.

While Cpl. Jack D. Adams, Mansfield soldier absent without leave from Camp Carson, Colo., waited in city jail today for an army military policeman to call for him, another Mansfield youth who was so eager to get into the army that he borrowed Cpl. Adams' uniform, was released from jail after a district U. S. marshal at Cleveland refused to prosecute him.

The civilian youth, picked up last week by Mansfield police for allegedly wearing a military uniform, is under 18 and too young to go into the army, authorities learned. The stage had been set for him to go into service had he been a little older.

He told city detectives that Cpl. Carson loaned him the uniform "to see how I looked in it." The youth was arrested by police after he had visited several amusement places with his girl friend.

way into Ohio State penitentiary with war bonds and stamps.

Inmates of the penitentiary will stage a radio broadcast and vaudeville show which the public will be permitted to witness from the chapel auditorium inside the prison walls.

The prison's dance orchestra—"The Rogues of Rhythm"—will highlight the show to boost war bond sales and scenes from the penitentiary's last Christmas show "Stars In Stripes," will be presented.

Purchase of $1 or more in war stamps is the admission price. Inmates of the penitentiary already have purchased more than $11,000 during the present campaign.

REACH ACCORD ON REFUGEES

British, Americans Agree On Temporary Havens.

HAMILTON, Bermuda — (U.P.) — British and American conferees have reached a basis for agreement upon establishing temporary refugee havens in North Africa, Cyrenaica and Ethopia, it was understood today.

The conferees compromised upon these areas, it was said, when the British proposed Cyrenaica and Ethiopia in return for American concessions o' North Africa.

The Americans first objected to North Africa on grounds that sending refugee Europeans to that area would interfere with military operations.

flicted "considerable" casualties on the enemy.

Ignoring the approach of the monsoon rains, when fighting becomes virtually impossible, the Japanese have been striking repeatedly at the British who now hold strong dug-in positions after withdrawing their exposed flank of the Mayu peninsula.

In the skies, British and American warplanes continued widespread attacks on Japanese river transport, airdromes, railways and other targets.

Dismiss Rumor of Stillwell Capture

CHUNGKING—(AP)—Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters dismissed as unfounded today the Axis radio report that the American general and chief of staff for Chaing Kai-Shek had been captured by the Japanese.

"Such a statement emanating from the enemy is a feeler founded on fancy rather than fact," a statement said.

DIES AGED 83

T. J. Morrow Had Lived In Leesville Most of Life.

GALION—Funeral services for Truman Jefferson Morrow, 83, who died Sunday at a convalescent home, 21 Greenwood avenue, Mansfield, will be conducted Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. at the Volk funeral home in Galion by Rev. KILLS DAUGHTER

Father Wounds Two Others Girls Shoots Himself.

BAY CITY, Mich., — (AP) — A father of six children, going berserk this morning in his barricaded home, shot and killed a ten-year-old daughter and critically wounded himself and two other girls. A fourth daughter also was shot.

While police fired tear gas into the home after vain efforts to calm the man, Cecil J. Lisk, 44, turned a shotgun on his daughters in an upstair bedroom and then dashed into the basement and shot himself in the head.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—I have collected some more information on the subject of margarine and the restrictive taxes thereon, state and federal, and, while the case seems not to contain the ingredients that crusades are made of it plainly amounts to a Grade B outrage and calls for relief. As I told you some time ago, the federal government collects a tax of one-fourth of a cent a pound on margarine at the factory and a license tax of $6 a year from each dealer in the uncolored product which looks like lard and is unappetizing to the eye, and 19 states have various taxes, some as high as 15 cents a pound. That is the rate in Wisconsin, which is a dairy state and was the source of much of the strength of the lobby against margarine many years ago. In addition, Wisconsin taxes the manufacturer of margarine within her borders $1,000 a year and the wholesaler and retailer $500 and $25, respectively.

Pegler

And the federal government collects 10 cents a pound on margarine colored before sale to the consumer and a license tax of $48 from retailers of precolored marge. This tax on precoloring has an obvious purpose. The idea is to make margarine unsightly and discourage people from using it. There would be just as good reason to forbid the coloring of butter because natural butter most of the year is very pallid and that rich golden complexion is a cosmetic effect achieved by the use of the same kind of vegetable dye that is provided for margarine.

The insincerity of the law in this respect is plain in the fact that when you buy uncolored margarine you can get a little shot of that yellow dope with it without having to pay the extra tax. If you color your own, you may do so free, and this means that congress and the state legislatures were not worried about the people's health but about the dairyman's profits. These dairymen are not little two-cow farmers whose wives churn up a small crock of butter and take it down to the store to trade for soda-crackers and calico.

They are big business, like the packers and other processors who make the margarine, but right now they are just millions of pounds behind the requirements for our own fighting forces and civilians and lend-lease and so on. They have all the business they can handle but still, for their benefit and for no other reason, the people have to pay a tax on a necessity which in some cases is proportionately as heavy as the taxes on whisky and cigarets.

There was a bill in the Wisconsin legislature a week or two ago which would have reduced the tax per pound from 15 cents to 8 and the manufacturers,' wholesalers' and retailers' license taxes to $300, $100 and $5, respectively. I don't know what happened to it, but I wouldn't give such a bill more than a prayer in Wisconsin.

As to the food values of margarine and butter you can pick a fight with a margarine man or a dairyman any time. However, the margarine people are proudly publicizing a report on butter substitutes by the committee on public health relations of the New York Academy of Medicine which claims that margarine, fortified with Vitamin A, is nutritionally equal to butter and recommending that all restrictive federal and state laws be suspended for the duration "of the butter crisis," meaning, no doubt, the duration of the war.

A man who says he spent six years campaigning for margarine says I may have a national scandal by the tail in reporting as I did some time ago that the federal government has been buying margarine for the army because says he, for years and years the dairy lobby has stuck into every war department appropriation bill a rider forbidding the use of any funds so appropriated for the purchase of oleo.

Well, just the same, Thomas E. Wilson, president of the Wilson company, packers, told me in Chicago a few weeks ago that he had delivered 25 carloads to the army in the last week and that the government was expecting to buy from 100 million to 110 million pounds for all purposes this year.

Well, and then an advertising man who represents two of the butter accounts in the country says the trouble with the margarine people is that they have always tried to represent margarine as a substitute for butter, which, he says, it isn't. He can take that up with the academy of medicine, because if the term "nutritionally equal" doesn't mean that margarine is a substitute I don't know my words.

He also complains that the margarine people imitate butter by coloring it yellow and asks why they don't color it red. Well why do the butter people imitate by coloring it yellow? Why don't they use red?

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

ONE of the Sardi set's most frequent topics of conversation these afternoons is the return to Broadway—after 10 years of absence and illness—of Vincent Youmans, the gifted composer whose musical scores were brightened by some of the best-lovel melodies in the memory of the Great White Way.

Youman's hard-won triumph over the disease which quelled his talent for so long is an example of no-kidding, this-is-real drama that captures the interest and imagination of show folk. The greatest specialists had agreed, grimly, that all the odds were against him. But Youmans accepted their opinions as a challenge rather than a verdict, and his success in confounding the experts has given the Main Stem a thrill—the kind of kick you get in a race track grandstand when the longshot whizzes out of nowhere and leaves the favorite in a cloud of dust.

Kilgallen

But that is not the only reason why Youmans is the target for so much verbiage in the midtown meeting places these days. The drama pages have announced that when he resumes his activities on Broadway, Vincent's role will be that of producer rather than his accepted one of composer. His ambitious plan is to produce three widely varied types of shows, putting them into rehearsal in quick succession—and not one with a song by Vincent Youmans.

This is really something for the boys to mull over, and they're mulling. It is one thing, the "show me" experts argue, to be able to pull a lilting tune out of the ivories, and it is quite another thing to build a show from scratch and make it click with the critics and the public.

Does he know what audiences go for? Has he a flair for finding talent? Will he be able to sit in a bleak, empty theater as dozens of nominees for fame do their stuff, and sense immediately the ones who can't miss against those who just miss?

That's what the boys want to know, and there are two ladies in Hollywood who could give them an interesting answer. They are pretty sure that Youmans is a sure-fire spotter of star material.

It was a coincidence that both these ladies happened to hit the Big Street at the same time, back in 1923, and the well-known long arm reached out even further to place both aspiring young actresses in the Knickerbocker theater on the same afternoon. Auditions were being held for the Henry W. Savage production of "The Leftover," for which Vincent Youmans had written the score.

The ladies—they were very young girls then—were totally obscure and inexperienced. One had gleaming, rich red-gold hair, the other was a brunet with a cameo profile and an air of elegance inconsistent with her lack of importance.

Scores of singers stood awaiting their turns and smiling hopefully from the barren stage that day, but these two caught and held the attention of Youmans. He looked, listened and lost interest in all the other. And although the red-head and the brunet had never before worked in a show, the composer insisted that Savage hire them both for fairly good parts—and he admits now that he put some of his loveliest songs into the mouths of these babes on Broadway.

He wasn't wrong that time about what the public wanted. Just ask the Hollywood mailman who totes their fan letters. Because the red-head was Jeanette MacDonald, and the elegant brunet was Irene Dunne.

IN HOLLYWOOD-- By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Love may or may not ruin digestion, but you'll find plenty of stars in the film capital who are convinced that digestion certainly ruins love.

Many actors and actresses, whose kisses—languid or fiery, according to dictates of the script—set the pace for things romantic on the silver screen, are convinced an individual must be actually hungry to be able to make love superbly.

Coons

Mae West and Acquanetta, the Indian actress, don't think so, but quick affirmative votes come from such players as Charles Boyer, Barbara Stanwyck, Deanna Durbin, Dorothy Lamour, Maria Montez, Constance Bennett, Robert Cummings and Diana Barrymore.

They all swear by an empty stomach as a good stimulant for romance.

Boyer, who has made perhaps as many feminine hearts fly in formation as any other screen actor, is a staunch believer in wooing before eating.

"One cannot think of love-making while meditating on the wonderful steak that has just been consumed," says the French romanticist.

For comely Deanna, a little tea and a sandwich is preferred as a mid-day repast if she faces an afternoon of sophisticated love scenes.

When Miss Stanwyck turns on her screen allure, she does it on black coffee. It used to be a dozen cups a day. But that was in pre-ration days.

Miss Bennett is a strong believer in celery eating before her love scenes. Cummings sticks to half an order of toast and jam, while orange juice and a sweet roll are favorites of Miss Barrymore.

Miss Montez, who puts a goodly quantity of fire before the cameras, does it with a small fruit salad, while the queen of the sarong, Miss Lamour, stands by her "jungle lunch" of papaya and a slice of pineapple.

And from the ranks of director comes this recommendation from Frenchman Jean Renoir:

"Certainly an empty stomach is the immediate answer to realistic love-making. Afterward—that's another matter. But when a young man proposes, he should do so before dinner."

Asquanetta, who has been partaking of a Venezuelan diet for several years, believes, however, that hot foods of the South American variety are responsible for much of the reputed Latin love technique.

"I keep right on eating those invigorating dishes—and plenty of them," admits this dark-skinned beauty.

And Miss West, exponent of such culinary fundamentals as three squares a day of meat and potatoes, still sticks to the full-diet argument.

"How can you make love on an empty stomach?" asks the buxom blond, and dismisses the subject forthwith.

Which probably is as good a place as any to leave it.

URBAN GROUPS BACK BRICKER ON REPEALER

Columbus and Cleveland Units Call For Action Lifting Tax on Meals.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — The Columbus and Cleveland Republican delegations in the Ohio house of representatives today line up behind Gov. John W. Bricker who is seeking a vote on the bill to remove the sales tax from food served by restaurants.

The six Columbus Republicans endorsed the bill.

The Cleveland statement asked the taxation committee to report out the sales tax measure so it could be voted on by the house.

Last week the nine Republican members from Cincinnati announced opposition to the bill.

Meanwhile, House Speaker William M. McCullouch said a caucus of the house's 110 Republicans probably would be held today or tomorrow to consider the governor's request for a vote on the measure, which was passed by the senate Jan. 26.

Some house Republicans feel the taxation committee is bound by the Republicans' caucus action of April 7, which Speaker McCulloch said was unanimously against further action on the bill.

The Columbus Republican members issued a statement last night saying the state treasury easily could stand a $5,000,000 a year reduction in revenues, or the estimated yield of the sales tax on restaurant food.

The senate last night rescinded its passage of a bill creating a 15-member post-war program commission.

The senate passed a house-approved bill allowing minors under the age of 17 to use firearms in marksmanship training and in hunting when accompanied by an adult.

The senate refused to concur in house amendments to a measure permitting previously licensed members of the armed forces to operate an automobile without a driver's license.

The house killed a bill proposing to classify hatcheries as an agricultural enterprise, a measure some members contended was intended to exempt hatcheries from unemployment insurance taxes.

The house passed a bill increasing from $1.50 a day to $3.00 the amount of fines prisoners may work out in jail. The measure now goes to the senate.

FCC STANDS PAT

Refuses To Dismiss Two Men Charged With Subversion.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The federal communications commission stood 4 to 3 today against the recommendation of a house appropriations subcommitee that it dismiss two of its employes for alleged "subversive" activities and termed the recommendation unconstitutional, inexpedient and unjustified.

The committee, headed by Rep. John A. Kerr, D., N. C., found William E. Dodd, jr., and Goodwin Watson "unfit" for government service.

The FCC said that there was "no basis or reason" for their dismissal, defended their loyalty to this country, indicted the subcommittee for attempting to tar and feather the men for crimes which had not been proven in courts.

MAYOR STUDIES RELIEF DATA

Reserves Decision After State Inspector Gives Him Figures To Compare Costs.

Mayor W. J. Locke declined to comment today on Richland county relief administration figures submitted to him yesterday by Mrs. Marian Brucker, state welfare department investigator, explaining that he wanted to study provisions of the relief agreement between the city and county before deciding whether it is possible to bring about further reductions in the cost of relief administration.

Comparative figures for other sections of the state submitted yesterday by Mrs. Brucker at a session with the mayor and Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff showed the county before April 1 was spending more than 19 per cent of its relief money for administration.

The cost percentage was among the highest in the state, although Clark county (Springfield) topped it with 23 per cent. Other counties dropped as low as nine per cent. The state has set 12 per cent as an average.

When the county commissioners recently lopped off $205 a month from the administration expense by furloughing two workers they dropped the percentage several points, however, and that decrease wasn't shown in the figures turned over yesterday to the city. The reduction will not show until the cost sheet for May is prepared since the two workers will remain on the payroll until May 1.

Mayor Locke said today that the steady drop in the number of relief cases in the past year in the face of slightly increased administration costs to April 1 prompted the cost check with Mrs. Brucker.

The county took over the relief administration three years ago under an agreement with the city which provided that the city and county share the costs of administration. The mayor said today he had no recent figures showing what percentage of the cost the city pays, and he wanted to obtain them from City Auditor Paul L. Kelley before making any recommendations for changes in the administration set-up.

STRIKE DEFERRED

CANTON, O.—(AP)—City street, water and garbage department employes affiliated with the CIO State, County and Municipal Workers of America have voted to defer a strike scheduled for today.

The City of Mansfield is not in the farming business, but it's going to follow the example of Richland county farmers and start planting trees to preserve and beautify its land. An order for 100 pine trees has already been turned in to the Richland County Fish and Game Protective association for trees to plant on the city's water supply holdings along the Clear Fork in the southern part of the county. Convinced that it won't do any harm to experiment with tree plantings, Mayor W. Locke said other trees probably will be obtained later to help cover the hills that provide water for the city wells. The state conservation division is urging the use of trees as a soil and water conservation measure and to afford cover for wildlife.

What has the moon to do with planting peas in a Victory garden? That is the question Clerk of Courts Howard Wenning would like to have answered. For some reason, the moon or another, he has had difficulty in that his seed peas are popping from the ground. Friends told him it was the wrong phase of the moon for planting, but Thomas Hoffman, who planted the same day and under the same lunar conditions, had no such difficulties. Could be that the depth of the two plantings, one a half inch and the other two inches, had something to do with it, they finally agreed.

CHECKING CLUE IN OHIO MURDER

Link Report on Three Negroes To Slaying of Waitress In Cincinnati Hotel.

CINCINNATI — Cincinnati police today were investigating a new clue in their search for the slayer of blond Sophia Baird, a 20-year-old waitress who was murdered early Sunday in the hallway outside of her third floor hotel room.

Robert Puckett, Middletown, reported to the Middletown police force that he saw three Negroes acting peculiarly when he passed the Biltmore hotel, where the girl was brutally slain. Puckett disclosed that this was at about the time of the murder.

Detective Chief Clem Merz said that except for the fact that the suspect was a Negro, his detectives had no clue to the slayer's identity.

More than 48 hours have elapsed since the former Elk Valley, Tenn, girl's body was found stabbed and slashed while detectives have been attempting to establish whether any act, unintentional or otherwise on the slain girl's part might have led a Negro to believe that she had no qualms about racial barriers.

Police questioned Miss Baird's roommate, Miss Mildred Sharpe and other friends of the girl but so far they have not uncovered anything to show that the girl had even the slightest association with her slayer.

Meanwhile, police were attempting to ascertain when an attack upon a 26-year-old housewife could have been perpetrated by the same Negro. Mrs. May McKinney notified authorities that a man answering somewhat the description of Miss Baird's slayer had attacked her at her home. Mrs. McKinney said the Negro fled when she screamed.

HEARING OFF

Fish Divorce, Property Settlement To Be Heard Monday.

The divorce and property settlement case of Mrs. Iva Marie Fish against John Fish, Shelby business man, was continued until next Monday in common pleas court yesterday after litigation over property and holdings involved had occupied the greater part of a hearing yesterday.

Attorneys and principlas in the case were instructed by Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch to produce necessary financial records and attempt to reach an equitable arrangement, if possible, before the date set for continuance. Only three witnesses besides the plaintiff herself were heard in support of her allegations of cruelty and habitual drunkenness which constitute grounds of her divorce action.

PLAN MARKERS AS PEDESTRIAN BLACK-OUT AID

OCD to Paint Parking Meters, Part of Lamp Posts White To Guide Traffic.

Pedestrians in Mansfield's downtown district will have markers to guide them during future blackouts under a plan which had been agreed upon today by city air raid wardens and Mayor W. J. Locke.

Parking meters, the lower part of lamp posts, railings, steps and other objects that extend into the sidewalk will be painted white by wardens to make the objects visible to pedestrians. C. A. Boughton, senior warden of the Eagles lodge post on North Main street, will be in charge of painting steps and railings while city workers will paint the parking meters.

Women employes in the business district will be organized into an auxiliary wardens' unit under the direction of Zone Warden T. C. Davis. After a period of training the women will be placed in charge of air raid shelters and first air stations, and will serve as wardens in business places.

Russell Gimbel, warden at the Friendly House post, was placed in charge of raid precautions in the district east from Mulberry street to the Pennsylvania railroad and from Fifth street north to the B. and O. railroad. He will be assisted by John Schuster.

In charge of activities in the downtown district will be J. G. Blahnik, head warden at the Montgomery Ward store post; Maurice Marquis at the Marquis Printing company post, and Albert Arnold, Kobacker's store wardens' post.

Plans are being completed for a school for wardens on gas bombs and air raid warning instruction. The school will be in charge of Senior Warden J. J. Whalen, manager of Kresge's Dollar store, while Harry Constance will be the instructor.

In a move to make the Mansfield business area one of the best equipped in Ohio from the standpoint of defense against air attack, merit award banners will be given senior air raid wardens who equip their posts according to state regulations. The merit award program is in charge of James D. Gaff of the Ohio Public Service company.

Mrs. Hattie Murphy, 73, Former Mansfielder, Succumbs.

Mrs. Hattie Deemer Murphy, 74, former resident of Mansfield, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Alfred Mumford in Columbus Monday afternoon following a long illness.

Mrs. Murphy was born in Greensburg, Pa., June 22, 1868, coming to Mansfield in 1914 where she made her home until going to Columbus five years ago. She was a member of the United Brethren church here.

Surviving are her daughter, two sons, Albert D. Murphy, salesman for the Tracy and Avery company here, and Joseph O. Murphy of Lakeville, a brother, Oliver Deemer, Greensburg, Pa., and four grandchildren.

The body was removed to the Finefrock funeral home where services will be conducted Wednesday at 3 p. m. Burial will be in Mansfield cemetery.

ALLIED ADVANCE STRIKES CLOSE TO TUNIS ROAD

Germans Lose 80 Tanks In Fierce Armored Clash In Tunisia.

more than 1,000 sorties in an air offensive which the announcement said was of "increasing intensity."

Armored spearheads of the British jabbing southeast of Goubellat threatened to cut off the big supply base of Pont Du Fahs, 34 miles southeast of Tunis, which already was menaced by the much-feared Moroccan Goumiers who had driven northeast along the Tunisian Dorsal to a hill overlooking the town.

The Goumiers "went like smoke" in their push on Pont Du Fahs from the southeast yesterday, front line dispatches said, and were within two miles of the objective.

The tank battle here appeared to be the key to the great fight raging all along the front.

In the wild and deadly action First army armored columns had reached one point only four miles from the supply road running northeast of Pont Du Fahs, and a second column had battered its way to within six miles of the artery.

Among 20 enemy tanks destroyed in the battle in which the Germans were believed to have committed all or most of their armored reserves were five 60-ton Tigers.

The day's most spectacular air blow was struck by Flying Fortresses which made their longest flight of the North African campaign and bombed Grosseto flying field, 90 miles northwest of Rome to give Il duce a hint of bombings to come.

Loosing hundreds of fragmentation bombs in two waves over the airdrome, the Fortresses scattered destruction among parked planes, and smashed buildings at the reserve German air force base.

In unison with British First army and American advances, the British Eighth army infantry too made "slight advances" in difficult hill fighting, a spokesman said.

But the main theaters were on the Axis' western flank where British Churchill tanks had been used in some cases to climb peaks 2,000 feet high and support the infantry.

The American advance in the Jefna area, too, was against "extremely difficult resistance," with the German rearguards leaving heavy minefields behind to cover their general retreat.

But the Americans were reported making progress in the valley east of Sedjenane and west of Lake Achkel, whose western shore is only 17 miles west of Bizerte.

The fierce armored battle in the Goubellat area southeast of Medjez-El-Bab was said to be still under way with the British continuing to make headway "against desperate opposition."

The British Eighth army also made further gains yesterday on the western end of the Axis southern flank.

The British took 260 prisoners in occupying the important hold-out position north of Medjez-El-Bab.

Two ships were sunk and others left burning when light aerial forces staged assaults on enemy shipping.

Altogether 11 enemy planes were shot down yesterday, compared with 11 missing Allied aircraft, the announcement said.

(The Italian communique, broadcast by the Rome radio and recorded by the Associated Press, asserted that Axis troops had gone over to the counter-attack in several places in the western sector after staving off powerful Allied infantry and armored forces' drives.

(In the air raid on Grosseto, the Italians declared that bombs and machine-gun strafing caused "great damage to civilian buildings among which were a Red Cross hospital and a kindergarten." Two Allied planes were shot down by anti-aircraft batteries, the Italians said.

(The bulletin also said that Bari, Augusta and Trant, and San Antioco were raided by multi-engined bombers, five of which were shot down by anti-aircraft.

(It was announced by the Middle East air command at Cairo that a strong force of United States Air Force heavy bombers left fires burning after blasting the airdrome at Bari.

(Quoting "authoritative quarters," a Berlin broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, said the "Anglo-American large-scale attack on the western flank of Axis positions in Tunisia has failed," and declared the British had lost 193 tanks in four days of fighting.)

U. S. Liberators 'Clear' Airdrome

CAIRO — (AP) — A heavy concentration of American Liberators dropped a quarter million pounds of high explosives yesterday on the Bari airdrome in southern Italy, a key assembly point for Axis aircraft.

"I would be surprised if a single plane was left intact on the ground," a bombardier of one of the bombers said. Bari is 50 miles north of the Taranto naval base and is on the Adriatic sea.

A communique today said hits were scored on hangars and grounded aircraft. Pilots said the raid was devastating.

Russians Step Up Air Blows In Kuban

MOSCOW—(AP)—Aviation activity had reached a new fury on the Soviet-German front today as Russians, with increased air strength, continued to blast Nazi forward and rear positions and communications.

The most intensive action still was in the Kuban region of the Caucasus.

Red Star, the army newspaper, said that following great air losses, the German air activity in the Kuban slackened after April 22 but Russian activity increased.

Observers asserted the Red air force had struck the German air arm such a sudden and heavy blow in the Kuban that Hitler's whole plan of air support for the Kuban counterattack has collapsed, at least for the present.

his new found friends in Mansfield.

Johnny—who cautioned the sheriff to direct all mail to him in his true name of "Joseph Pertz"—asked that he be remembered to all his friends, particularly attaches and friends of the Salvation Army. "Tell the whole Salvation Army 'hello' for me," he concluded after enumerating most of its residents by name.

Mindful of the gifts and kindness of sheriff's officers, "Johnny" voiced thanks to the "fellows" and reiterated his promise to Sheriff and Mrs. Robinson that "I will come back to visit you as soon as I'm 16 and I'll help with the dishes then." The boy had previously begged to wash dishes and do household chores in payment for his future lodging there.

SALES SLOWER

Liquor Store Says Supplies Last Longer Under Plan.

"Stooge" buyers were eliminated and waiting lines were shorter at the Mansfield liquor store yesterday went into the new zone plan of buying went into effect, but sales were not fewer.

Estimating that not more than 10 per cent of the customers were turned away because of inadequate means of identification and residence outside the one the store serves, attaches said it was 3:30 p. m. before they sold the last of their supply alloted for sale yesterday.

Social security cards alone no longer will be considered as means of identification, clerks pointed out, since state social security directors have called to their attention the fact that many cards are not issued in the correct name and address of the bearer.

Pursuit Ship Richland Women 'Bought'

Shown above is a P-47, Thunderbolt pursuit ship, purchased through the bond selling efforts of the women's division of the Richland county war bond drive organization last November. Striving to sell enough bonds to buy a bomber, the women did not only that but had enough left over to purchase a pursuit ship in addition. During the second War Loan drive now in progress the women's division has set as its goal the "outfitting of an outfit" and hopes to sell enough bonds to completely equip 1,000 fighting men. The pursuit ship has been named "Richland County, Ohio" as is indicated in the picture just received in Mansfield.

SEES ATTEMPT TO BOMB OHIO

State Defense Director Says Raids Likely as Aid To Axis Home Morale.

boost morale at home. An air raid on American cities might serve as a shot-in-the-arm to his people. then, too, a raid would give a spectacular touch to the Nazi war effort and, it is believed, delude other nations into thinking that Germany remains a powerful force despite recent reverses. In that connection, German and Italian newspapers have been urging air raids on the United States.

4. Hitler hates America and all that it stands for. If a raid would curtail operations of a major war production plant or kill a few of the leaders directing the nation's war program, it would be a success.

5. Germany has produced planes large enough to cross the Atlantic and return. Ideal flying weather will accompany spring and summer American observers reported that Hitler and Mussolini may have discussed an air attack on the United States at their recent Brenner Pass conference.

Ohio is considered by Washington officials as definitely a potential target area inasmuch as it has 1,000 industrial plants, considered essential by the army, employing 200 or more workers.

Recent statistics place the number of Ohioans working in war industries at 1,000,000. In other words, one person in every six is employed in some occupation which contributes directly to America's war effort.

Hitler always has done the unexpected and his threats to bomb Atlantic seaboard cities may be so much talk designed to catch midwestern industrial areas off guard.

Sities on Lake Erie as well as Columbus, Dayton, Cincinnati, Youngstown and Steubenville have long been recognized as potential industrial bombing targets.

From German bases established in Norway, Ohio cities are much closer in air line miles to enemy nations than New York, Boston, Philadelphia or Baltimore. The army believes that enemy raiders would fly over the Arctic circle in conducting an attack on the United States. This course with little variance would put them in the vicinity of Detroit, Cleveland, Toledo, Sandusky, Conneaut, Girard, Youngstown, Akron, Ravenna and Canton.

Ohio's importance in America's war production program goes without question. The Axis would be helped considerably if any of Ohio's industrial plants were compelled to curtail operations for any length of time.

It is important, therefore, that we prepare for any eventuality. We are not immune from attack and we may awaken some morning to find that the possibility of an air raid has turned into a grim reality.

Knox Calls Raids On Coasts Possibility

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Secretary of the Navy Knox said today there is "always a chance" of enemy nuisance air raids on either the east or west coast of the United States, but he considers the possibility of such raids remote.

Knox was asked at a press conference whether the Japanese might employ their projected air base on Kiska island, at the tip of the Aleutians chain, at a base for attacking the west coast by air.

He considers it remote, he explained, because of improved American defenses, the fact that "we're engaging the enemy elsewhere," and because the Japs "are already spread pretty thin."

Knox added that the country must assume the possibility of air attack remarking "it is not safe for us to do anything else."

but they, too, agreed that an early rapprochment was possible.

Britain already was taking steps to bring about a reconciliation.

Moscow dispatches said the Russians long had been watching anti-Soviet activities on the part of Poles in certain foreign countries, but took no official cognizance so long as the campaign remained unofficial.

The break came when the Polish government committed itself by asking the International Red Cross to investigate German propaganda charges that the Russians murdered 10,000 Polish near Smolensk in 1940 without asking a Soviet reply. The Russians claim that the Poles were slain by the Germans.

Pole-Russ Break Blow To Allied Diplomacy

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The rupture of Polish-Russian Diplomatic relations was realistically viewed today as a major defeat for President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill's diplomacy if for no other reason than it will comfort the Axis.

It came at a moment when Washington apparently was moving further to appease the Soviet Union with a major diplomatic rebuff to Finland—a state with which Russia is at war and the United States is at peace. There are unconfirmed rumors that the United States is about to break relations with the Finns.

While the state department "regretted" the Polish-Russian break, some others thought it was grounds for even more emphatic expressions of diplomatic sorrow. Sen. Theodore F. Green, D., R. I., considered it "tragic" and other congressional commentators expressed misgivings.

ONE RELEASED

Soldier Poser Freed, Another A. W. O. L. Waits Return.

While Cpl. Jack D. Adams, Mansfield soldier absent without leave from Camp Carson, Colo., waited in city jail today for an army military policeman to call for him, another Mansfield youth who was so eager to get into the army that he borrowed Cpl. Adams' uniform, was released from jail after a district U. S. marshal at Cleveland refused to prosecute him.

The civilian youth, picked up last week by Mansfield police for allegedly wearing a military uniform, is under 18 and too young to go into the army, authorities learned. The stage had been set for him to go into service had he been a little older.

He told city detectives that Cpl. Carson loaned him the uniform "to see how I looked in it." The youth was arrested by police after he had visited several amusement places with his girl friend.

Purchase of $1 or more in war stamps is the admission price. Inmates of the penitentiary already have purchased more than $11,000 during the present campaign.

REACH ACCORD ON REFUGEES

British, Americans Agree On Temporary Havens.

HAMILTON, Bermuda — (U.P.) — British and American conferees have reached a basis for agreement upon establishing temporary refugee havens in North Africa, Cyrenaica and Ethopia, it was understood today.

The conferees compromised upon these areas, it was said, when the British proposed Cyrenaica and Ethiopia in return for American concessions on North Africa.

The Americans first objected to North Africa on grounds that sending refugee Europeans to that area would interfere with military operations.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, APRIL 27, 1943.

Don't think that the sun isn't shining—it's merely the clouds in between that darken your day.

Four of our presidents were born in April—none in May or June—if astrologers care to make anything of it.

The soldier who wrote the reminder, "Remember you are the arsenic of democracy," may not have been a poor speller—he may have had John L. Lewis in mind.

Ohio's Leaderless Legislature

NEBRASKA is the only state, thus far, that has decided to experiment with a unicameral legislature—motivated by a desire to cut cost and increase efficiency.

Ohio rather tolerantly plugs along with a bicameral legislature, from which not much is expected and which therefore causes little disappointment.

Whether a state has a one- or a two-house legislature appears less important than that persons chosen to do the legislating be of at least average intelligence and, insofar as possible, act honestly, without partisan bias, and free from the influence of lobbyists for special interests or groups.

Whatever expense to Ohio taxpayers has been involved in carrying its two-house legislature through 17 weeks of muddling may be charged off as total loss, for whatever has been done might better have been left undone and what remains to be done could have been done within a month and the point of adjournment reached weeks ago.

Discussion of the time-change bill, in which the only sensible proposal was made by Richland county's representative, John L. Catlett, occupied many weeks during the early stages of the session, and the house is now fussing around with a bill to remove the sales tax on restaurant-served food and prescription drugs, which the senate passed unanimously late in January.

The house also killed a bill intended to stiffen penalties for operators of the numbers racket, and the senate utilities committee turned thumbs down on the Kane bill intended to establish a fairer method of valuing property of public utilities for rate making purposes.

Delaying legislative action on liquor rationing, coupled with inept administrative handling, provides another example of unbusinesslike procedure and absence of intelligent leadership.

Ohio's bicameral legislature provides an excellent argument for one of the unicameral sort—but maybe that would be just as bad.

What Soldiers Think About Strikes

ARMY MEN are generally supposed to fight and let other fellows do the talking. But a fighting man is a citizen like other men, and surely a man who has served his country so well as Maj. Milton H. Ashkins has done, in the terrible Aleutians area, and received the Distinguished Flying Cross for courage and brilliant combat, may have not only a right, but a duty, to tell his fellow-countrymen the truth.

"I'm for arbitrating labor disputes in the front lines, where the lead is thick and hot," says Major Ashkins. "There isn't a reason in the world for a strike in time of war. Labor has enough laws to protect it from discrimination, so that strikes are unnecessary under any circumstances.

"Why, when we heard about strikes at home while we were fighting like hell in sub-zero temperatures in Alaska, we used to fly into rages. It damaged our morale more than anything else that came our way. If guys want to strike, they should be taken out and machine-gunned. Hell, this is war, and the sooner the American people realize this is a fight to the finish, the better it will be for all of us."

That is rather rough, in spots, but it is so nearly in accord with expressions of other service men who have been engaged in actual fighting that it merits thoughtful consideration by unreconciled minorities who indulge in strikes, slowdowns, or other devices which hamper an all-out war effort in this country.

Defenders of the right to strike in war-time have equal opportunity to state their case, in the event they wish to do so.

Monroe and His Famous Doctrine

THE MAN who gave his name to the Monroe Doctrine, even if he did not contribute all its ideas, should always be remembered by Americans. James Monroe, our fifth president, comes to mind with the recurrence of his birthday anniversary tomorrow. He is a shining example of what may be accomplished, even without supreme talents, by untiring application and indomitable perseverance. Everyone liked Monroe, everyone trusted him and he finished whatever he started.

A disciple of Jefferson and a lifelong friend of Madison, with service in congress and the governorship of Virginia to his credit, as secretary of state under Madison he came naturally to the presidency in 1816. So great was his success that four years later he was re-elected with but a single electoral vote cast against him. The tradition is that it was cast by an admirer of his administration who nevertheless would not make his election unanimous "so that no other man might stand in Washington's shoes."

Although not so great a man as several of our presidents, in efficiency of administration he ranks well near the top. His period in the presidency was known as "The Era of Good Feeling."

Jobs for Ditchers With Small Feet

THE CLASSIFIED advertising section always has been one of the most entertaining parts of a newspaper, and is now more so than ever. War has brought about queer situations, with advertisers offering or wanting many queer things.

A firm in Sacramento, Cal., for instance, has been asking the U. S. employment service to find six laborers to clean ditches. Nothing strange about that. But these ditchers must have feet small enough to wear size nine shoe or less.

The firm, it appears, has just six pairs of rubber boots left and is unable to buy any more. None of the pairs will fit a foot larger than size nine.

In that popular nursery rhyme about the little pigs—with one having roast beef and the next having none—the advantage of conserving red coupons can also be emphasized.

Word comes from Texas that a woman has been sent to prison for making a slave of a man "without the formality of a wedding ring."

Even without figuring how far a million Washington bureaucrats would reach if put end to end, the idea sounds interesting.

Decisive Engagement of the War Nearing Climax In North Africa

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

FIERCE FIGHTING, frequently with cold steel in hand-to-hand conflict, is continuing among the powerful defenses in the great arc of mountains behind which the Axis forces are making their final stand on African soil.

This was to be expected, and the battle among the peaks is likely to go on unceasingly and with increasing intensity until the Hitlerites crack. We are witnessing no ordinary struggle but one of the decisive engagements of the whole war, for the United Nations operations against the Nazi-held European continent depend in large measure on our success in Tunisia.

The Axis collapse may or may not come quickly, but it can be expected to come suddenly when it finally arrives—and arrive it will.

Virtually the whole arc is in violent eruption. The Allies are hitting it from end to end, thereby compelling the enemy to defend himself in many places at once.

British, American and French forces are stabbing violently into the Axis defenses in five main operations — chiefly astride strategic highways running through the mountain vastnesses to the coastal plain beyond — and have been making progress in all sectors, though slowly and with bloody toll.

These five operations — which actually are subdivided so nearly a dozen thrusts are being made—are like the fingers and thumb of a hand which is squeezing a toy balloon. Sooner or later one of those fingers will sink deep enough to explode the balloon.

Just so, sooner or later one of the attacking forces will break through and open up a route to the coastal plain. Over that route will pour our mechanized forces, and the end of the great battle will be in sight.

Indeed, the Algiers radio reports French forces have broken through the mountains guarding the Tunis plain in the neighborhood of Pont Du Fahs, near the southern end of the line. This is the unit which was credited with capturing the important heights of Djebel Mansour. Details are lacking to enable us to judge just what has happened in this sector.

ON THE far northern end of the line we have the French, who are driving eastward along the coast towards Bizerte. Just below them is our American corps under Lieut. Gen. George S. (Blood and Guts) Patton, jr., recently transferred there from the southern sector with such speed and efficiency as to draw commendation from British General Sir Harold Alexander.

The Yanks have been swinging into action like veterans and have been holding up their end of the show well. They are astride the highly important Sedjenane-Mateur highway and railway, and have captured several enemy hills in an advance of several miles.

Below the American corps is the British First army, hammering away on either side of Medjez-El-Bab which they hold and which is center of several highways, as well as a railway. Below them are the French operating in the Djebel Mansour sector.

Then of course clear down in the southwest, at the end of the line, is the one and only Montgomery with his Axis-busting Eighth army which is thrusting northward along both the coastal road and the highway to Zaghouan.

The American and British air forces continue to pile a mighty lot of straws on the Axis camel's back. They are driving the enemy out of the air, blasting the communications between his bases and his mountain forces, destroying the supply depots themselves, and going a long way towards isolating him from continental aid.

But the air fleets are doing more than that. They are the eyes of our ground forces which otherwise would have to push more or less blindly in among the Axis mountain defenses. Naturally there's a lot that can't be seen from a plane over such concealed positions, but a pilot can see more than can the chap on the ground.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Friday, April 27, 1923.

Mansfield mother failed to recognize her delinquent 10-year-old son after he had been given bath at Salvation Army barracks.

F. W. Beach was elected president of newly organized Izaak Walton league.

Daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Earl Davis, Marion avenue.

W. L. McAnnich took position with the Buckeye store, corner East Fourth and Diamond streets.

Mansfield high school baseball team defeated Ashland, 9 to 7, in opening game of season, at Ashland.

Mrs. Robert Moore, 74, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Cairns, 410 West Fifth street.

Mrs. Charles A. Fernald, formerly Miss Nellie Collins, of Mansfield, died at her home in Columbus.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On April 27, 1865, the Steamboat Sultana, with exchanged Union prisoners of war aboard, was destroyed by a boiler explosion on the Mississippi river with a loss of 1,450 lives.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT

"Don't make the mistake of confusing this with any ordinary tool."

Dave Boone Says:

WITH fathers, husbands and sons fighting and dying that the Easter of our hearts and minds might live, this was an Easter that was pretty generally observed with a depth of feeling beyond anything in the memory of this generation. You could sense it everywhere.

* * *

Nature was in perfect tune with Easter this season and the miracle of the resurrection as symbolized in homes and fields by the sudden bursting forth of entombed bud into blossoming flower was everywhere visible. It made our master showmen and spectacle specialists seem fifth-rate amateurs.

* * *

I often wonder what a fellow with a great rep as a showman, artist, director of musicians thinks of himself as he beholds the resurrection as produced on a Sunday morning in spring without ballyhoo, bunk, or the monkeyshines of a "preview."

* * *

And I wonder how press agents feel. That the most glorious spectacle in human experience can come through without them must undermine their morale a little.

Words of the Wise

Timely Editorial

Optional Necessities.

The "necessities of life," a phrase that has included almost everything, may have to be revised before the war is over.

American Institute of Public Opinion discloses that in a list of 10 necessities — butter, sugar, canned goods, meat, coffee, gasoline, shoes, cheese, tires and fuel oil—there is a wide spread between public opinion on the necessity of meat, which is the thing hardest to cut down on, and cheese, which is the easiest thing.

Gasoline occurs before sugar, butter and canned goods and right after meat and coffee, the two most cherished necessities. But of course any list of average preferences fails because pedestrians and vegetarians would have no need for gasoline and tires, and diabetics and tea drinkers would have to substitute something for sugar and coffee. The upshot of any attempt to prepare an inclusive list of necessities would be to include everything under the sun, with a general footnote that every one of them could be done without in a pinch: i. e., all necessities are optional.—Canton Repository.

Davis Works Terrifically to Pry Facts Out of Government Offices

WASHINGTON—When you sift down all the hullabaloo about Elmer Davis and his Office of War Information, the only valid criticism you can make against the drawling Hoosier is that he is working too hard. The last two weeks when he went on the air, he was so exhausted he had a stand-by alongside to take up his script if he collapsed.

Davis works far into the night, tries to read all that his volumnious office produces, sees almost anyone who wants to see him.

But given a tough situation, basically he has done a good job. Senators like Montana's Wheeler and Nevada's McCarran, whose acid digestive systems are always poisoning their political outlook, make a wry face at Davis. But Wheeler and McCarran are always demanding more facts and inside fact is that Davis has been fighting their battle in keeping the American public informed.

Most of Davis' fight is getting news, squeezing it out of government bureaus which don't want to give, making the army and navy release facts which show up their mistakes, rowing with Czarubber Jeffers because his estimates on tires are too rosy.

When Davis stepped down from his well-paying radio job to correlate government information, everyone envied him his job, thought he had a softie. But the job of digging news, accurate news, unpleasant news out of the government is not soft. And it is not popular.

Davis is a good newsman. Being such, he is not popular, never will be in some quarters.

Note: Davis did his best to release the story on bombing Tokyo long ago. Several times he urged the White House that the American public should know the facts. Earlier, when the Japs released a picture of U. S. fliers supposedly captured in the Tokyo raid, Davis wanted to point out the truth, namely that these were naval fliers, not Doolittle's. They had been captured in a naval battle. This explanation was broadcast to foreign countries by OWI, but Davis, through no fault of his, was not permitted to tell folks at home.

FDR's Congressman.

AS COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, the president has supreme powers in the conduct of the war, but he is just another citizen on the books of the Hyde Park, N. Y., rationing board.

At a recent White House meeting, the president was telling three congressmen, Gale, Republican of Minnesota, Jackson, Democrat of Washington, and Manasco, Democrat of Alabama, about the "red tape" involved in buying meat and groceries on his trips home to Hyde Park.

"I have my problems with point rationing the same as you fellows," he grinned.

"Why don't you write your congressman?" suggested Republican Representative Gale.

The president reflected briefly, then threw up his hands and roared with laughter.

"Oh, no," he exclaimed, "not that!"

The man who represents the Hyde Park district in congress is Hamilton Fish, one of the most vitriolic, vituperative foes the president has in congress.

Army Politics.

POLITICS is played every day on Capitol Hill, frequently with a smile. But army politics is a grim and serious business. Take the mysterious tug-of-war going on back-stage regarding the new surgeon-general of the U. S. army.

Gen. George Marshall, chief of staff, had selected as the new surgeon general, brilliant, popular Brig. Gen. Albert W. Kenner, who did an outstanding job as chief doctor for U. S. army forces in the tough North African campaign. Marshall ordered Kenner back to Washington under orders so secret he was told not to report to medical corps headquarters. Knowing how army politics operates, Marshall did not want news of the appointment to leak out, and induce rival candidates to get busy.

However, the news did leak out and army politicos started lobbying. Most powerful lobbyist was venerable Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, surgeon general of the army during the World war. Another was Col. William L. Keller, head doctor at Walter Reed hospital. Both are retired, so it is permissible for them to pull wires in a way active officers couldn't. They got their views to the White House against Gen. Kenner.

Instead Gen. Ireland and Col Keller backed Brig. Gen. Norman Kirk, a bone specialist, who had an interesting record in the days when he was up for promotion from lieutenant to captain. Another doctor popular with the medical corps is Brig. Gen. George Lull.

The wire-pulling over this coveted medical post extended to Gen. B. B. Somervell and Undersecretary of War Patterson. One point some people made against Gen. Kenner was that he is a Catholic. Some members of his family are, but he isn't. But why a Catholic can't be a good doctor is hard to understand.

However, just before the president was about to leave on his Mexican trip, and was in a hurry, the Kirk appointment was put on his desk. Gen. Kenner is going to the Pacific like the good soldier that he is.

Merry-Go-Round.

A HIGH RANKING army officer, just back from a U. S. tour, makes this observation: "High morale may be lowered by too much talk of post-war planning, which makes the boys think the show is almost over." . . . If the Japs were still in their Washington embassy, they could set their clocks by lanky Will Clayton, astute deputy to Jesse Jones, who walks three miles to work every morning. He passes the defunct Jap embassy precisely at eight... Argentina's visiting newsmen got little publicity as they toured the U. S., were a bit miffed at the press silence. Then as they finished their tour came a surge of publicity over the previously censored story of their near-drowning at Fort Benning, Ga. Said Juan Valmaggia of La Nacion, "If we had realized that, we would have fallen into the river at every army post we visited."

ERNIE PYLE — Roving Reporter

One of Those Sleepless Nights When Ghosts Seem to Be Wandering About.

NORTHERN TUNISIA — (By Wireless) — We moved one afternoon to a new position just a few miles behind the invisible line of armor that separates us from the Germans in Northern Tunisia. Nothing happened that first night that was spectacular, yet somehow the whole night became obsessed with a spookiness that leaves it standing like a landmark in my memory.

We had been at the new camp about an hour and were still setting up our tents when German planes appeared overhead. We stopped work to watch them. It was the usual display of darting planes, with the conglomerate sounds of ack-ack on the ground and in the sky.

Suddenly we realized that one plane was diving straight at us, and we made a mad scramble for foxholes.

Two officer friends of mine had dug a three-foot hole and set their tent over it. So they made for their tent, and I was tramping on their heels. The tent flap wouldn't come open, and we wound up in a silly heap. Finally it did open, and we all dived through the narrow opening all at once.

We lay there in the hole, face down, as the plane came smack overhead with a terrible roar. We were all drawn up inside, waiting for the blow. Explosions around us were shatteringly loud, and yet when it was all over we couldn't find any bomb holes or anybody hurt.

But you could find a lot of nervous people.

DUSK came on, and with dusk began the steady boom of big guns in the mountains ahead of us. They weren't near enough for the sound to be crashing. Rather it was like the lonely roll of an approaching thunderstorm—a sound which since childhood has always made me sad with a kind of portent of inevitable doom.

We went to bed in our tents. A nearby farmyard was full of dogs and they began a howling that lasted all night. The roll of artillery was constant. It never stopped once in 24 hours. Once in a while there were nearer shots which might have been German patrols or might not.

We lay uneasily in our cots. Sleep wouldn't come. We turned and turned. I snapped on a flashlight.

"What time is it?" asked Chris Cunningham from the next cot.

"Quarter to one," I answered. "Haven't you been asleep?"

He hadn't.

A plane droned faintly in the distance and came nearer and nearer until it was overhead.

"Is that a Jerry or a Beaufighter?" Chris asked out of the darkness.

"It hasn't got that throb-throb to it," I said, so it must be a Beaufighter. But hell, I never can tell really. Don't know what it is."

The plane passed on, out of hearing. The artillery rolled and rolled. A nearer shot went off uncannily somewhere in the darkness. Some guinea hens set up a terrific cackling.

I remembered that just before dusk a soldier had shot at a snake in our new camp, and they thought it was a cobra. We'd just heard our first stories of scorpions, too. I began to feel creepy and wondered if our tent flaps were tight.

Another plane throbbed in the sky, and we lay listening with an awful anticipation. One of the dogs suddenly broke into a frenzied barking and went tearing through our little camp as though chasing a demon.

My mind seemed to lose all sense of proportion, and I was jumpy and mad at myself.

Concussion ghosts, traveling in waves, touched our tent walls and made them quiver. Ghosts were shaking the ground ever so lightly. Ghosts were stirring the dogs to hysteria. Ghosts were wandering in the sky peering for us in our cringing hideout. Ghosts were everywhere, and their hordes were multiplying as every hour added its production of new battlefield dead.

You lie and think of the graveyards and the dirty men and the shocking blast of the big guns, and you can't sleep.

"What time is it?" comes out of darkness from the next cot. I snap on the flashlight.

"Half past 4, and for God's sake go to sleep!"

Finally just before dawn you do sleep, in spite of everything.

NEXT MORNING we spoke around among ourselves and found one by one that all of us had tossed away all night. It was an unexplainable thing. For all of us had been through dangers greater than this. On another night the roll of the guns would have lulled us to sleep.

It's just that on some nights the air becomes sick and there is an unspoken contagion of spiritual dread, and you are little boys again, lost in the dark.

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

Precipitation Helps

FOR ten days past, the wind was cold. Snow and light rain were the regular order. For six consecutive days, snow was always visible against the northern slopes and on the thick, woodland floor.

Neighbors, to ride their tractors, wore heavy overcoats, caps with ear tabs and heavy winter gloves. Those who drove their teams, and walked, were also quite uncomfortable. I saw one farmer stop his team and use a narrow piece of shale to peel the thick coat of sticky clay from the soles of his rubber boots.

But for all its inconvenience, such weather has served a good purpose. The coat of melting snow has moistened, like a sponge, the upper two inches of surface—made it soft and porous, even on barren hills and eroded slopes where humus is lacking. Rain followed and penetrated deeper until now it has reached a depth of six or seven inches. The snow first, then gentle soaking rain, is a boon to workers on upland and poorer soils. In all clay lands, the added moisture will not evaporate so rapidly.

Deep March freezes caused heavy damage to wheat fields and meadows of red clover. All the little knolls that now lie bare tell their own story of loss. Roots along the drill rows are open to wind and sun and green blades show only about the center. These days of constant slow precipitation have made it possible, in places, for hooved out roots to re-establish themselves and begin to grow.

I looked across an alfalfa field where last year the farmer harvested five tons to the acre. It was a sight. Close knit crowns stood above the surface of the soil a space of two or three inches. White and dark gray, they were, like millions of fleshy tender worms. Not even ten days of gentle soaking moisture can undo all the damage caused by alternate deep freezing and thawing—but wheat, clover and alfalfa will benefit more than can be estimated.

Besides, inclement chilly weather has kept the buds of peach and apple orchards from coming out too soon. The wild apple beside our kitchen door and the peach buds on the hill are still unharmed.
